Bennett Sounds 'Vietnam' Alarm

B.C. Next Domino In NDP Blueprint

MERRITT — Premier Bennett Tuesday night warned that British Columbia is the Vietnam of Canada.

Financed by United States unions, which want to see all provinces and even the federal government fall to the socialists like dominoes, an army of tough NDP organizers has quietly slipped through the Rocky Mountain passes to infiltrate British Columbia to try to overthrow Social Credit.

It's all part of a socialist master-plan to take over the country, which went into operation this summer when the NDP seized power in a sleeping Manitoba, he claims.

So the premier, travelling 25,000 miles he says in a chauffeured government limousine, is sounding the alarm throughout B.C. to ensure Liberals realize they will be voting against free enterprise by supporting their party, instead of switching to Social Credit Aug. 27 to stop the socialist advance.

But the province is waking up and the premier is more confident that the government will be returned than he has been in all previous elections he has called.

That was Bennett's message to about 320 persons here who listened quietly for the most part, but murmured with laughter a couple of times.

Gently Heckled Through Speech

The premier was heckled gently through an hour's speech, the longest of his campaign so far, and accused about 10 persons who ostentatiously walked out on him at intervals of "being Liberals who can't take it."

He was speaking on behalf of Irvine Corbett, one-time Socred MLA making his third bid to beat William Hartley, who took the Yale-Lillooett seat from him for the NDP.

Here's the NDP battle strategy as revealed by the premier:

"No provincial election was so important ever as this one, and this is not time for splinter parties.

"The provincial Liberals are just a splinter, and a Liberal vote is just as bad as a vote against free enterprise.

"This is no time to stick with party and if ever there was a time to walk the floor and vote for our party that time is now."

Hundreds of 'Troops' Moved In

"They have moved hundreds and hundreds of their troops to B.C. from Saskatchewan — canvassing everywhere, throwing political dust everywhere.

"And the labor-boss money is coming in from New York and Washington, D.C.

"Who put up the founding money to get the CCF name changed to the NDP? Our attorney-general gave the facts and figures.

(Attorney-General Leslie Peterson last session quoted U.S. Congressional records showing international unions with Canadian affiliates had made donations to help finance the founding convention of the NDP.)

"Make no mistake, the socialists won because Manitoba was asleep. If they win here it will not be because you were not told," he contiued.

"If they win in British Columbia they'll move their troops to Saskatchewan next, that Liberal province of Saskatchewan, and I ask you Liberals to think about that.

"And then if they win there, they'll go on to Ontario.

"And then they will go on to the federal government.

"The socialists have this plan and I know it.

"I'm here as premier to tell you that there is this situation here, and I am speaking to you here in Merritt and to all the people in this province, so you will know what the issue is in this election.

"But I have confidence in the people of British Columbia.

"I am confident more tonight than ever before that Liberals and Conservatives here and elsewhere in this province will support the government candidates because they don't want state socialism.

"And I'm confident more than I've ever been in any other election before that the Social Credit government will be returned.

"And that's the reason why I'm here, because as your premier I want your help.

"Because if the socialists are elected in B.C., capital will not come into our province. It will go out and we need capital to make jobs.

"Socialists won't have to do a single thing in the legislature to hurt the economy of this province.

"The very day they're elected, which God forbid, they'll hurt this country."

There was a ripple of laughter and Bennett angrily responded: "My friends, this is no laughing matter. This is very serious business."

$1 MILLION BIBLE ROBBERY THWARTED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—A 20-year-old rope-climbing buglar apparently fell early today from the Widener Library of Havard University while attempting to carry away the $1 million Guttenberg Bible.

Police said they found Vido K. Aras of the Dorchester section of Boston lying on the ground nearly unconscious in the library's interior courtyard. Above the young man was hanging a 40-foot rope attached to a mezzanine window.

Authorities said the famed bible was in a knapsack beside Aras. He was taken to Cambridge hospital with lacerations and a possible skull fracture, apparently sustained in a fall from the rope.

Aras was charged with breaking and entering and with possession of buglary tools.

Keeping Informed Costly for Public

The provincial government massive "information" campaign, mounted earlier this month, has left at least one senior government official uninformed.

The official in the department of health was asked this morning what funds had been appropriated for the information advertising campaign placed in every daily newspaper in the province and most of the 104 weeklies serving rural areas.

He said he had no idea what the advertising budget was or who was reasonsible for placing the advertisements.

"I don't know what the budget is," he said. "I didn't have anything to do with it, and, to the best of my knowledge, this department isn't being charged."

DOES NOT KNOW

When asked if he could provide the name of the individual in charge of the information campaign, which government members claim is not part of the election campaign but coincidental to it, he said he didn't know "which department was responsible."

When it was pointed out that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Dr. J. A. Taylor were listed as the official signers of a series of pollution informations the official said: "Yes, I know my name's down there, but I still don't know who placed the advertisements. To the best of my knowledge they are not being charged to this department."

It was learned, however, that at least one of the advertisements—a five column by 15-inch "health branch policy concerning sewage treatment" display published throughout the province Aug. 13—is being billed to the B.C. Government, Department of Health.

Estimated cost of this advertisement alone if placed in all dailies and weeklies in the province, would be $13,000.

But that is only one of a series of advertisements slammed throughout the province since the first week in August.

McGEER CONFIDENT AREA WILL SWING

People 'Reject Extremism'

By JOHN DRISCOLL

When he talks about the resurrection of the Liberal party, Pat McGeer's speeches crackle with energetic words.

Words like vim, zip, fire, guts, dynamic and climax.

Liberal leader McGeer used them all Tuesday as he stumped through what he called the "swing ridings" of Victoria, Esquimalt, and Saanich and the Islands.

He told about 300 supporters at an Elk Lake corn roast that the Liberals can form a majority government with these ridings.

"Our campaign has not yet reached its peak in some ridings," he said.

SEE CHANGE COMING

"But you can see the change coming here, the name change we've seen in the interior and in the north."

McGeer who has predicted Liberal wins in 15 ridings made no predictions about local ridings held by Socreds in the last legislature.

"Give us four additional seats here to add to the one (Oak Bay) we have now."

The Social Credit ship is sinking, said McGeer, because they have failed to come up with new and exciting candidates.

"Surely there must be questions about this woefully weak representation."

"The problems around the province, Victoria's got in spades," he said.

McGeer said the priorities in Victoria are cleaning up polluted beaches, cracking down on air pollution, eliminating hospital crowding, nourishing the University of Victoria and ending the neglect of highways.

He said Premier Bennett has waged a campaign of fear, beginning with "the unbelievable appeal to vote for him in order to avoid the Marxist Socialist NDP conspiracy."

"You've heard the charges he's made. I ask you—are these the rational statements of a leader who has a vision of the future for British Columbia?"

The Liberals as the commonsense, middle-of-the-road, party are attracting thousands of supporters who are rejecting extremism of the left and of the right, he said.

"Take courage and join us. Elect the dynamic young Liberal candidates who will form the next government."

Continuing the positive approach he has taken from the outset of his campaign July 25, McGeer announced:

"I'm now arranging to move to Victoria to live here year-round."

LONE HECKLER

A lone heckler pumped McGeer about his stand on medicare.

McGeer answered that while he was in favor of medicare the most pressing problem was the lack of hospital beds.

A few moments later the heckler and a youth made menacing gestures toward each other and McGeer snapped: "Let's settle our political arguments with rational discussions and not by violence."

The pair did not come to blows.

Economic Council Pledged by Berger

By BRUCE YEMEN

VANCOUVER — New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger said Tuesday an NDP government would try to end an "every man for himself" attitude on the part of management and labor by putting representatives of each on a British Columbia Economic Council with major responsibilities.

Berger made the policy statement shortly after arriving here Tuesday from an extended interior swing which has improved his hopes for an NDP government after Aug. 27.

He was to campaign in Vancouver Centre today before heading out Thursday on the final leg of his campaign.

Berger said the NDP would set up a broadly representative economic council and give it the job of charting a course for the development of secondary industry in the pursuit of full employment in the province.

Besides giving advice on what incentives the government might provide for council would make public secondary industry, the council would make public forecasts of economic activity for the year and years ahead.

It would be the hope of the government that management and labor could accept the responsibility for keeping wage and price patterns within the forecast limits.

This was not intended as a "magic solution" for economic problems, said Berger.

But it would be a serious attempt to encourage a sense of responsibility in labor and management.

RESPONSIBILITIES

Berger said the council would be equipped with a permanent chairman and skilled staff, it would have larger responsibilities in B.C. than the national Economic Council has in Canada, but the two bodies should work closely together.

Decisions on economic policy would still rest with the cabinet and the legislature, Berger said, but the assistance offered by the council would end the province's current "seat of the pants" style of economic policy-making based on insufficient knowledge.

Political Battle Developing As U.K. Army Guards Ulster

BELFAST (CP) — A running political battle appeared developing today as the British government, backed by 6,000 troops, took a firm grip on Northern Ireland's security forces and prepared to make its voice heard in the way Ulster is governed.

The agreement reached at 10 Downing Street in London Tuesday night between British Prime Minister Wilson and Ulster Premier James Chichester-Clark already has come under attack from leading figures in Northern Ireland's governing Unionist party.

One former minister said there will be a powerful demand for Chichester-Clark's Protestant government to resign.

The two leaders wrangled for six hours late Tuesday night before agreeing on a communique which placed all of Northern Ireland's public security forces —including the B-Specials, hated by the minority Roman Catholics—under the control of the British Army.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations today the security council listened to the Irish Republic's complaint about British actions in Northern Ireland but agreed with Britain that any action would be unwarranted interference in Britain's internal affais.

FULL RIGHTS

Ireland asked for a UN peacekeeping force to be sent to Northern Ireland to keep the peace between Protestants and Catholics, insisted that Northern Ireland was an integral part of Ireland and said British troops in the north would cause trouble.

But the council voted 15-0 not to take action.

The communique from London also pledged full civil rights for all Ulster citizens, regardless of religion, and provided for two senior British civil servants to be attached to the Northern Ireland government in an advisory capacity.

Well-informed sources in London expected a high-ranking British cabinet minister to be appointed full-time to the Ulster government in the near future.

Britain has residual authority to take complete control from the hands of the Northern Ireland government and run the country as it pleases. The moves announced by Wilson came nowhere near such action but they represented the most drastic act of intervention in Irish affairs since the nation was partitioned and Southern Ireland became an independent state.

Wilson said in his broadcast that the assumption of responsibility for law and order did not mean any alteration to the 1920 Act of Partition which split Northern and Southern Ireland. He emphasized there was no question of any boundary changes.

Moon Motion: Free and Easy

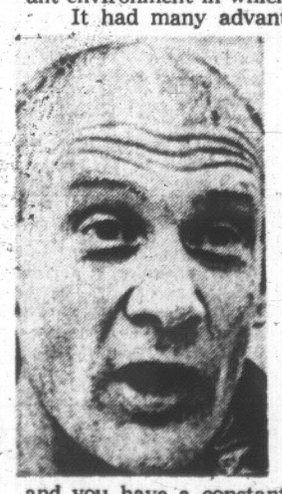

This is the second in a series of first-person accounts by the men who walked on the moon. Today Edwin Aldrin gives his impression of the incredible feat in which he shared, as pilot of the lunar module and the second man on a celestial body.

By EDWIN E. ALDRIN, JR.
(Special to the Times)

I am curious to find out just how long those footprints will linger on the surface of the moon. It was a very good surface for footprints; that light, rather powdery material turned out to have considerable cohesion and it compacted easily.

The moon was a very natural and very pleasant environment in which to work.

It had many advantages of zero gravity in that all movements required a very low application of force, but it was in a sense less lonesome than zero-G, in which you always have to pay attention to securing attachment points to give you some means of leverage. You have no sense of up or down and there's no such thing as having any balance because there is no force or resistance to a pushing action.

In one-sixth gravity, on the moon, you have a distinct feeling of being somewhere and you have a constant, though at many times ill-defined, sense of direction and force.

One of my tasks was to try to determine just which is the best means of locomotion on the surface of the moon. Not surprisingly, it turned out to be the same one we use here: one foot in front of the other. The kangaroo hop, jumping with both feet, can be used but I felt it gave me less control of my motions.

Long, almost loping steps seemed to work best. It's quite natural in that environment to take longer steps than on Earth, because everything seems to move in slow motion and you get an almost floating feeling. You can't get your feet moving quite so fast to begin with, but it is also more difficult to stop your motion.

about bringing this flag back!" asked Burnham, marching up to the trailer of a transport truck that served as a platform.

McGeer said he would like to see the Ensign adopted as the flag of British Columbia, replacing the "ham-and-egg one we've got now."

"The present flag doesn't mean anything," he said. "The Red Ensign means a great deal."

Burnham said he would be 100 per cent behind that."

McGeer, however, said the flag issue is not a part of the provincial campaign. "I think it's ridiculous that they spent six months federally debating what flag they were going to adopt."

During the question-and-answer period, McGeer said tighter controls must be placed on strip-mining operations in the province.

"Our mines minister (Frank Richter) wouldn't even go to Kentucky to see how it is done and what the effects are."

McGeer's enthusiasm remained undimmed even when an afternoon rally at a Colwood shopping centre failed to attract more than a dozen youngsters and a few adults.

"Is Mr. McGregor aboard?" asked one of the youngsters with a McGeer poster on his bicycle.

McGeer and Esquimalt candidate Fred Phillips spoke through a megaphone in a light drizzle to an invisible audience.

"I know there are quite a number of you in your cars because of this rain," said Phillips, hopefully.

McGeer's schedule included a private confab with a local Liberal organizer. He did not visit any local mayors as originally planned.

With McGeer at the corn roast were local candidates Phillips, Ian Stewart and Mel Couvelier (Victoria); Louis Lindholm (Saanich and the Islands) and Allan Cox (Oak Bay).

Wednesday's plans included a visit to a Saanich shopping centre, a meeting with Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and main-streeting in Duncan.

McGeer takes his campaign bus to the northern Vancouver Island ridings, Wednesday and Thursday.

Giri Election Stunning Win For Gandhi

From AP-Reuters

Giri, 75-year-old former trade unionist who served briefly as acting president, narrowly defeated the official Congress candidate, Sanjiva Reddy.

Mrs. Gandhi had opposed Reddy's nomination by the party and refused to endorse him.

There were 15 candidates in the election but only three had a substantial following. The third was C. D. Deshmukh, representative of right-wing parties.

Under India's election system a candidate must collect an absolute majority of first-preference votes. If there is no majority, all but the top two candidates are dropped and their second preferences are distributed among the leaders until a majority is reached.

WIN IS NARROW

Giri got 401,515 votes, 48 per cent of the 836,337 first-preference votes cast. A total of 418,169 was required. The votes were cast by members of legislatures and Parliament. Reddy received 313,548 first-preference votes, or 37.5 per cent.

Dehmukh received 112,769 first-preference votes. It had been widely assumed that those who supported him would cast their second preferences for Reddy.

The remaining 12 candidates received only 8,505 votes.

Bargaining Goes On In Two Big Strikes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations continued today in British Columbia's two major labor disputes, affecting oil workers and meatcutters.

Some 550 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union have been on strike since May against six Vancouver-area oil companies. Main issue is wages, with the strikers seeking a $1 hourly increase over two years on pre-strike rates ranging between $2.95 and $4.05.

The meatcutters were locked out by Vancouver-area supermarkets in May, after strike action was threatened. The 800 meatcutters want a four - day, 36-hour week and a $1 an hour wage increase. The rate now is $3.80.

The dispute closed more than 100 supermarkets, but many have since re-opened. Grocery clerks are crossing meatcutter picket lines at a number of stores.

The meatcutters have threatened to extend picketing to a number of wholesale food outlets tonight. No statements were issued after Tuesday's talks, and there was no indication whether the extended picketing would be carried out despite the continuing negotiations.

Talks in the oil industry dispute have been going on since Saturday, with negotiators attempting to define local issues that affect each plant before moving on to wages.

been processed by the same Vancouver-based advertising agency.

Estimated total cost of the word campaign, again if placed in all dailies and weeklies in the province, would be well in excess of $150,000.

Allan Williams, Liberal candidate in West Vancouver-How Sound, has already claimed that the advertising campaign is costing between $500,000 and $750,000 when radio and television costs are included.

Government members of the legislature insist that the information campaign has nothing to do with the election.

W. N. Chant, minister of public works, said in Victoria last week that people complain when the government doesn't keep them informed and then complains when it does.

Of all the advertisements placed before the public during the past two weeks listing Social Credit government accomplishments, only the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Board advertisement is part of a program established before the election call in late July.

In addition to the newspaper information campaign—which is paid for by the taxpayer not the Social Credit Campaign Committee—several government department information sheets have taken on a political look during the past two weeks.

The regular weekly bulletin from the Department of Labor outlining a "summary of activities for the week ending Aug 8" lists six pages of "the many services provided" by the department.

A similar bulletin from Waldo Skilling's department of industrial devlopment contains an information booklet on the department with Skilling's name prominently featured.

Red Thinkers Hit Invasion

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Sixteen dissident Moscow intellectuals today condemned the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia and said it threatened the future of socialism.

In a written statement made available to Western reporters on the first anniversay of the Aug. 20-21 invasion, they said they were reiterating their opposition to the "tragic" invasion because of "pain for our fatherland."

Among the signatories was Pyotr Yakir, 46-year-old historian son of Gen. Ion Yakir, shot in a 1937 Stalin purge. Yakir is unofficial leader of the dissident group.

Collision Pair Out of Hospital

Mrs. Sylvia Turner, 1308 Oliver, and her 12-year-old daughter Peggy, were treated for shock at the Royal Jubilee Hospital and released following a two-car collision at Richmond and Oak Bay on Tuesday.

Police said the Turner car was in collision with a car driven by Mary L. White, 903 Collinson, and then crashed into the front porch of 1902 Oak Bay Avenue.

Damage to car and porch was estimated at about $3,599. Damage to the White car was about $150.

Tear Gas Stops Czech Protesters

PRAGUE (CP) — Police fired canisters of tear gas at random to disperse demonstrators gathering in Wenceslas Square in the heart of Prague today on the first anniversary of the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Several persons were arrested, including seven or eight youths who were bundled into a waiting police bus.

The violence erupted when persons started gathering in the square and the police moved in to stop the crowd from becoming too large.

Police and militia stationed around the square—a focal point for Czechoslovaks embittered after the Soviet-led invasion a year ago today—earlier stopped people without a definite destination from crossing it.

After a night of protests, the anniversary of the invasion started quietly in Prague with long lines of women forming outside stores to buy stocks of food.

Reformist leaflets called on the public not to stop Friday—or use buses and trains—and this coupled with fears that demonstrations could disrupt normal trade for day the likely reason for the hoarding.

WATCH KEY POSTS

Unofficial reports today said key workers at important factories, government installations and offices were told to keep watch on their work places tonight.

One worker said he was told he must remain at his place of employment after normal duties this evening to help guard the place.

But he said his instructions were only to call the police immediately there was sign of trouble and not offer resistance himself.

The militia appeared to have doubled its guards at the installations and were double checking the identity of all persons—even permanent employees—entering government buildings.

At dawn the smell of tear gas was still in the air around Wenceslas Square from the demonstrations Tuesday night in which police repeatedly charged the crowds to break them up.

Jeeps raced around the square carrying policemen who fired tear gas into the angry crowds. Water cannons sent demonstrators scurrying for cover as a convoy of loudspeaker trucks demanded the crowds disperse.

About 500 riot police clubbed the tear-gassed crowds to clear Wenceslas Square three times. Twenty persons were believed arrested and three were injured.

REFUSED TO MOVE

The crowds refused to heed police orders to move on. When force was used, they taunted the police with whistles and cries of "Gestapo! Gestapo!"

In side streets leading to the square were scenes reminiscent of the debates last year, when young Czechs asked Soviet tank crews why they had come and they they didn't go home.

This time young Czechs accused their own people, the police, of making trouble and told them to go home.

This morning all was quiet in the square but police and soldiers were posted on street corners. They halted pedestrians and turned them back if they had no definite destination.

The confrontations of Tuesday night began a few hours after Communist party chief Gustav Husak told the country the invasion was forced by the reformist leadership of liberal Alexander Dubcek.

Husak, a hardliner who replaced the popular Dubcek, came close to blaming Czechoslovakia for the invasion—an admission dearly wanted by the Kremlin.

Peking Marks Invasion Anniversary

HONG KONG (Reuters) — The first anniversary of the invasion of Czechoslovakia was marked today in China with nationwide radio broadcasts attacking the Soviet Union for its "suppression of the Czechoslovak people."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The blanket of cloud persisted over coastal areas of B.C. today in an onshore flow of cool moist Pacific air. However, the interior of the province was mainly sunny. Showers were numerous in south coastal areas this morning as a weak disturbance slides inland across the Washington coast. The showers will gradually taper off behind the disturbance and the odd sunny period is expected on Thursday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

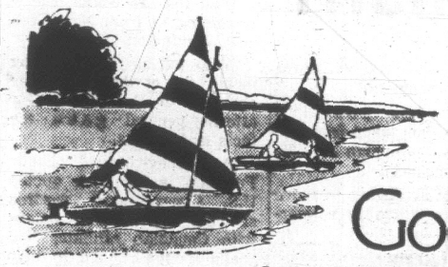

The weather helps you to smell the odors in your environment and it also helps to kill odors. I live in Tucson, where this neat arrangement is emphasized from season to season.

The June, the weather is dry. The relative humidity drops to as low as 5 per cent and seldom goes above 30, before daybreak. We don't sniff the stables on either side of us then. We don't get a smell of anthing else that could be unpleasant to the nose. It's too dry.

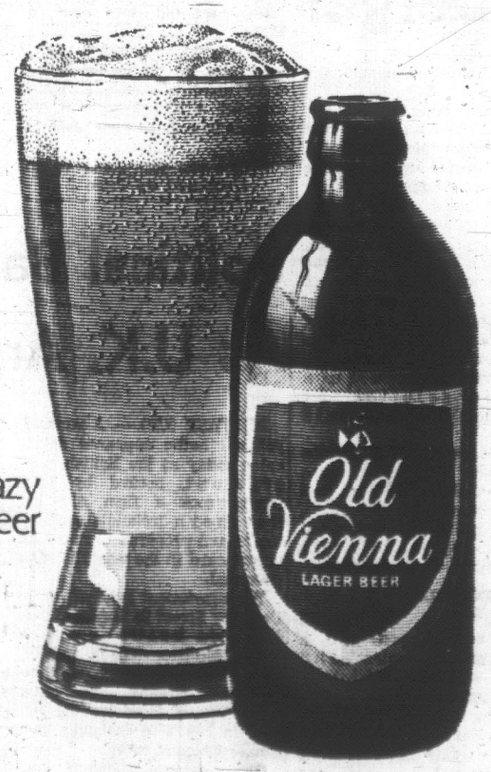

In August, when it rains in our town, and the relative humidity is high, we then smell the stables, the scent of greasewood and the delightful odor of wet earth—expecially right after a rainstorm.

A side effect of the weather is that when it is dry the efficiency of the olfactory nerves in the nose is decreased. In wet weather the nose functions better, with more mucus to help dissolve odors that smell both good and bad.

Oak Bay Socred Avoids 'Bennett Team' Label

By JOHN MIKA

Oak Bay's Social Credit candidate has, undoubtedly, been let in on the worst-kept secret in last year's Oak Bay byelection.

That's the one about the Socreds themselves believing they were running strong and pulling ahead until Premier Bennett insisted on coming in to make a clinching speech.

He blew the whole thing to Hades.

Despite bitterness over that, voting patterns suggest the Socreds were a little over-optimistic anyway.

Ever since they have been serious contenders (in 1953 they captured 47 per cent of the vote to run a close second) they've been fighting a losing battle.

Heavy Margins

By last year they were down to 35.4 per cent, winning one poll by a mere five votes, losing the other 81 by heavy margins.

They were given 52 per cent of the popular vote in 1953 and have stayed well out in front even in the intervening elections when the NDP and Conservatives re-entered the fray.

In 1966 their share shot up to 54.5 per cent and last summer it zipped further up to 59.6 per cent of all the ballots counted.

The NDP slipped back to 5 per cent from its 1966 level of 6.5 per cent and the Conservatives didn't bother to nominate either of those years just as they have skipped this campaign.

Distinguished

The Social Credit candidate is Dr. G. Scott Wallace who has distinguished himself since immigrating from England by becoming the most vocal Oak Bay alderman, criticizing government policies in the fields of hospitals, sewage treatment and pollution control, education and even the administration of medicare.

Wallace conspicuously eschews the "Bennett team" designation adopted by the government's campaign headquarter. He advertises himsilf as an unashamed "right-wing" candidate and pointedly has not asked the premier to come into the riding to help.

Meanwhile, he continues to lambaste the inadequacies of hospital accommodation, government failure to finance a pilot home-care program for convalescing patients and a variety of other services.

When asked about his tactics, Wallace says he believes the Socred administration is so good that it can stand some peripheral and constructive criticism.

He also firmly denies that he's been planted as a Bennett sheep dressed in wolf's clothing, protesting it is obvious he remains his own man because he never asked to be a candidate. He says the Socreds came to him despite his growing reputation as an independent critic of some Bennett policies.

However, his explanation shies clear of even mentioning who masterminds the government's strategy and controls those Socred agents that came to invite him to be

WALLACE

While Wallace continues to get surface attention and the help of some 30 youthful workers, the Liberals are campaigning hard in direct contact with voters.

A long-service Oak Bay councillor and former reeve of the municipality, Allan Cox still projects the image of the local boy who stands up for his area.

String of Wins

Also important, he's one of the political wizards in the province, with a long string of wins as campaign manager for Liberals in both the provincial and federal fields.

And he didn't hurt himself in his freshman legislative session last spring after stepping into the ring himself at the age of 40.

Phone canvassing isn't appreciated when the voter has to come in from his beloved garden to answer the call, but he doesn't mind — often is pleased — when the canvasser comes to his garden and praises the petunias while leaving some political literature to be read at leisure.

No Headlines

So it's not surprising that personal canvassing is a big part of the Liberal program this summer — even if it doesn't get headlines.

Before election day, virtually every household in the Oak Bay riding will have received three pieces of Liberal literature from "mail drop" crews or volunteer canvassers.

Saturation Social Credit advertising in the media and mass circulation of expensive "slick" brochures, the Liberals have found in the past, are effectively countered by a simple and unsophisticated endorsement letter personally addressed and signed by individuals and sent to friends.

About 450 Liberal supporters now are taking the trouble to sign and send some 9,000 mimeographed notes supporting Cox to receptive or uncommitted acquaintances and friends.

Many of the recipients will get several such missives, because of overlapping, but the past has shown this "criss-cross" magnifies the impact and the ripples keep spreading as a surprised recipient tells his fellow-workers, neighbors and others about the number of persons who have taken the trouble to endorse the Liberal candidate.

Personal Touch

Paid advertising never transmits that personal touch and the Liberal campaign is likely to win its share — or at least prevent a sweep — of new voters in the riding.

The voters' list stands at 23,992 this time, an increase of 4,356 and probably the main group that Wallace has to reach if he is to have any chance of wiping out the comfortable margin of 3,214 votes Cox had in his smashing victory last year.

The NDP also are campaigning but with the usual shortage of resources it necessarily is a muted effort essentially intended only to show the party flag in the free enterprise bastion.

Jack McKenzie, a young technician, is the latest socialist hopeful to be given the "honor" of bearing his party's standard in a riding which the NDP regards as more unlikely to favor it than even South Okanagan — where Oak Bay's own Premier Bennett, happily far from home, watches the count on election night.

Presence of Campaign Pro Tells Tale in Van-Centre

By BRUCE YEMEN

VANCOUVER — Just how badly the New Democratic Party wants to win Vancouver Centre's two seats from the Social Credit party is hard to tell from the detached demeanor of Gordon Brigden, 43-year-old professional campaign manager from Bramalea, Ontario.

But it can be told from the simple fact that he is here to mastermind the drive to unseat Socreds Herb Capozzi and Evan Wolfe in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

Brigden is a dry, friendly man whose special talent is organization. He not only makes thorough campaign plans but he manages, without breathing fire, to see that the volunteers carry out the plans.

That's why there aren't many people standing around drinking coffee in the party's downtown Granville Street campaign office. They're out knocking on doors in such politically challenging places as Gastown and Chinatown.

Candidates Emery Barnes, 39-year-old social worker and ex-B.C. Lion football player, and Bill Deverell, 32-year-old civil rights lawyer, are pounding the pavement in the province's toughest, most unpredictable constituency.

Earlier this year he spent several weeks on Vancouver Island as campaign manager for T. C. Douglas in the Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands federal byelection.

Brigden has been a full-time election campaign strategist for eight years. Unassuming in a rumpled cardigan over colored shirt and slightly-askew tie, Brigden is a 9 a.m. to midnight worker.

He says he has a better feeling about his party's chances in Vancouver Centre than he did at the same stage of the successful Douglas campaign earlier this year.

But it's close, closer than some NDP officials thought it would be a few weeks ago. They expected to win going away, but now are finding Capozzi and Wolfe tough to leave behind in the ethnically, economically and socially diverse riding.

Between slipping political floats into the Pacific National Exhibition parade (to the anguish of parade organizers) and hosting beach parties and barbecues, Capozzi has been knocking on a lot of doors himself.

But the Socreds admit they are far behind the NDP in reaching the voters personally. They have been doing spotty, one-time canvassing while the NDP does total three-times-over canvassing.

The riding is ablaze with election signs. Socred campaign manager Wally Ronald's sign order book tells the story of escalation in that phase of the campaign: Successive orders of 66, 50, 20, 40, 2,000, 1,500 and 500 signs of all sizes. The NDP seems to have as many or more.

The Socreds won the seat by margins of 900 and 681 over the NDP in 1966 but since then the voters' list has spiralled from 35,000 to 46,000. Besides the bulk increase, the population of the largest part of the riding—the west end apartment district—has turned over an estimated one and a half times or 50 per cent a year.

The NDP strategy is to hit all areas of the riding with equal vigor, which means campaign leaflets are issued in three languages—English, Chinese and Italian.

Liberal candidates Terry Devlin, a 36-year-old businessman, university student and bachelor, and Garry Miller, 45-year-old insurance adjuster and father of 10, have their best hopes in the apartment district but are not likely to challenge the leaders. At six feet, six inches and 240 pounds, Emery Barnes stands out on the streets of downtown Vancouver even more than he did on the football field for the University of Oregon and the B.C. Lions. A native of New Orleans, La. He became a naturalized Canadian citizen in 1962 and has made a name for himself as a dedicated social worker and youth worker in Vancouver.

Deverell is an acknowledge authority in the field of civil rights law and has been executive secretary of the B.C. Civil Liberties Union. He worked as a newspaperman for several years.

One of the hottest issues in the riding is a specialty of Deverells'—the rights of tenants. Both in the apartment complexes and in the riding's huge public housing developments, tenants have been concerned about their legal relationship with landlords.

Cultural survival is a big issue for the Chinese community, which backed Capozzi and Wolfe in 1966. But plans for a freeway cutting through Chinatown have disturbed the political balance there.

NDP leader Berger spent the afternoon touring the riding today in an effort to boost the campaign.

Social Credit campaign chief Ronald, who is secretary-treasurer of Wolfe's Chrysler dealership, feels more confident now about the Socred chances than he did a week ago.

But the Liberals' Brian Fogarty, one of several under-25 Liberal campaign managers in the greater Vancouver area, thinks the Socreds' campaign "peaked" last week and is going downhill now.

Back for a Re-Phil

WITH THE FLAMBOYANCE that is his platform trade mark, Mr. Bennett tells us that "no constituency is in the eyes of the nation and of the continent so much—no constituency is being watched more than Kamloops, and when it votes for Gaglardi it will echo and re-echo across this nation and the continent."

Now, apart from the inclusion of "the continent" in Mr. Bennett's assertion, this statement has a deal of truth in it. But it is being interpreted in a somewhat different way from that which the Premier obviously intended. For Mr. Gaglardi's re-election — if it should occur — would indeed be watched across this province and much of Canada, not with a sense of joy and gratitude, but with feelings of disbelief and dismay.

The former minister of highways was removed from his office following a series of unsavory revelations which, despite his protestations of innocence and good intent, were widely viewed as sufficiently embarrassing to mar his usefulness as head of a government department. Mr. Gaglardi's subsequent appointment as a minister without portfolio, and his assignment as head of a government job agency which has been granted $100,000 without appreciable result, have done little to re-instate him in public esteem despite the applause of a vociferous home-town group.

That Mr. Bennett has now seen fit publicly to promise him a department if re-elected indicates either an amazing ignorance of the thinking of a host of good citizens in British Columbia, or a realization that some desperate measure is necessary if the former Kamloops member is to make it into the House this time.

The belief is that Mr. Bennett will lose many more votes for his party than he will gain for Mr. Gaglardi by such an incredible announcement. For the Premier to declare from a public platform that "the government needs Phil, the province needs Phil" is either to succumb to the utmost cynicism or to disclose a frightening shortage of talent in the Social Credit fold.

How could anyone get up with a straight face and say that "the province needs Phil," with the implication that Phil is being bestowed on the people as one of the election goodies, along with higher pensions, bigger homeowner grants, larger health service grants and the rest of the Social Credit grab bag. Mr. Gaglardi has only one thing in common with these ready pledges: like them, he will not be a gift from the government but an expense to be shouldered by the taxpayers.

If Mr. Gaglardi as head of a department is being dangled as bait, what must the fish be?

Congratulations all Round

THE SATISFACTION OF LOCAL residents with their purchases of Saanich municipal debentures both this summer and last have been matched by the interest with which the municipality's direct venture into the bond market has been viewed by mayors and aldermen across the country. Mayor Hugh Curtis and his council scored a first in Canada with the plan to hire a fiscal agent and sell Saanich debentures over the counter just as any business firm would do.

The response of individual purchasers, most of them residents of the municipality, was considered "astonishing" in financial circles, and institutional buying quickly took the remainder of the original $1.9 millions issue yielding 8 per cent. Less than a year later another issue of nearly $1.5 millions found ready acceptance, at a slightly higher yield of 8.75 per cent.

These necessary transactions, showing originality and initiative, took place when bond issues were having rough sledding in the money markets, and many municipal governments were turning to their provincial administrations for help to raise funds. To have enjoyed such success twice within ten months was at once a tribute to the acumen of the Saanich mayor and council, a recognition of the sound financial position of Saanich, and a measure of local public confidence in the management of the municipality's affairs. The echoes, at any rate, reached as far as Bay Street and St. James Street, and into many a council chamber between here and there.

The Cheering is Restrained

IN WESTERN COUNTRIES, where his acerbity influenced people but made few friends, Krishna Menon's return to the political spotlight in India will draw few cheers. He regains a measure of his former stature as Prime Minister Indira Gandhi directs the Congress Party leftward.

She has been aided and encouraged in this direction by Krishna Menon who, though he was fired from Nehru's cabinet under conservative pressure and drummed out of the party, has maintained his influence among the leftists and, on the basis of support given to Mrs. Gandhi, may anticipate advancement along the road back to power among Indian government leaders.

His association with Mr. Gandhi raises significant questions for Westerners. At no time did he hide his admiration for the Soviet Union or for Communist China until, as India's Minister of Defence during the border flare-ups of 1962, the poorly equipped army for which he was responsible suffered ignominious defeat at Chinese hands.

Provided Menon continues to advance again in a leftward-leaning Congress Party, the Western leaders will have reason to expect diminishing sympathy from India in the continuing ideological struggle between the world's power giants. Time, and a period in the political wilderness, may have mellowed Mr. Krishna Menon, but at this point it is impossible to count on that.

Is the Public Protected?

CENTRAL SAANICH POLICE Chief Fred L. Brownlee's prescription for juvenile delinquents—unremitting hard work from sun-up to sundown with spankings where they seem to be required — will draw protest in certain quarters. At the same time, his illustration of frustrations suffered by police officers dealing with juveniles underscores the difficulties of those who are engaged to protect the public.

"Recently," he reported, "we had a 17-year-old boy in our office. He was arrested for stealing a car. He just laughed at us; he laughed at me, at his father, at everybody. He told us we couldn't touch him."

For excellent reasons, society today, at least in this area, takes the position that the juvenile offender needs treatment directed toward correction and rehabilitation. It is no part of the acceptable program to place the juvenile in an environment which could lead to his development into a hardened criminal. The reasoning behind the philosophy is sound.

There is public concern, however, that the system may fail to give the victim of juvenile delinquency adequate protection or redress and, in the process, demoralize the peace force entrusted with the job of providing protection.

What is necessary now is proof that the system being used is effective. And that can be found only in statistics and an assessment of the social environment that is being produced among youth.

". . . he shot an arrow in the air . . ."

Ambiguity

Quebec L'Action

"You can think what you like." This is the typical answer that has been given to us on numerous occasions by the premier of Quebec, Mr. Bertrand.

Mr. Bertrand did not fail to come up with this quip on the occasion of the interprovincial conference where he transformed, at least in words, the whole concept of the Canadian Confederation — a transformation which no doubt passed unnoticed because of the subtlety with which it was expressed. What did Mr. Bertrand mean to say when he spoke of member states of Confederation instead of provinces?

They change their vocabulary often in Quebec. We're not too sure whether we are a province or a nation or a society, or a pseudo-society or a pseudo-nation . . . Let's go back to the election platform of the Union Nationale in 1966. There we read . . . "the French-Canadians compose a nation," "all nations have the right to a self-determination," "make Quebec a true national state," "give French the status of a national language." . . .

And it is with this that the Union Nationale came to power! But with Mr. Bertrand's speech to the premiers of the other provinces, the nation has just been replaced by the society. Ten states, two societies. It is much less compromising than the word nation, and everyone can find what he likes in it . . . "Think what you like."

AFTER THE BINGE

Can Canadians Re-Assert Their Old Character?

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

LET US BRIEFLY ignore the economics of inflation. This is a difficult thing to do but I think we can manage it by concentrating our minds for a moment. After all, the government of Canada ignored inflation for at least five years without straining its faculties and regarded those who didn't as the enemies of progress, the saboteurs of society. In any case, the psychology is more important than the economics.

Hutchison

Anyone can understand, in a mathematical sense, why prices are rising to a point where the prime minister at last recognizes the risk of "disaster." The thing is quite simple — we spent more money than we possessed and demanded more goods than we produced. But the mental process behind the mathematics is more difficult to explain. Why, in short, did the Canadian people lose their heads and run amuck?

Retiring from the Senate, Hon. T. A. Crerar, the wisest and finest of our elder statesmen, delivered a notable valedictory. Among other things, he said that some 80 per cent or more of the Canadian people were sensible, decent and patriotic, the best people in the world.

Foreigners might not go that far but they have always supposed that Canadians, while perhaps dull and uninspiring, had a rare native gift in the management of their practical affairs. Such was our established legend and image — a nation of hardheaded, thrifty pioneers who might not write poetry but knew how to govern a harsh northern land.

Yet it is the same people, you and I, who have so grossly mismanaged our practical affairs that we discover, of a sudden, that we are in a dreadful mess. What went wrong? What has happened to the legend and image? What kind of people are we in actual fact today?

What Went Wrong

It is easy to see in retrospect what went wrong. After a splendid record of achievement in wartime we entered the peace with the notion that, having done so well, we could do almost anything. There was no lack of feverish politicians to tell us that the twentieth century now belonged to Canada, as Laurier had said at its beginning.

So it appeared. A starving world economy bought all the goods we could sell, at our prices. The United Nations listened to our advice with a respect paid only to great powers. We were in the big league and the sky was the limit. Thus, in a state of general euphoria, our governments, business managers, labor unions and the rest of us undertook to spend more and do more than we could provide out of our existing resources. Now we pay the price in devalued money and falling self-respect.

That was the original source of inflation, a psychology contradicting the whole Canadian character as we understood it. But our mistakes should not be exaggerated. We did better than most nations, except Germany and Japan which, in defeat and ruin, went to work while the victors took it easy. On the whole we achieved an economic prodigy and even today, with all our troubles, the margin between the impossible and the possible is very narrow. Unlike many other peoples we don't face anything approaching austerity, much less sacrifice. All we need is a little common sense, a revival of our old Canadian instinct.

The revival, I believe, is happening already. (though the reader must allow for my incurable optimism). It is happening most obviously not so much in the policies as in the psychology of the nation's leader. Any prime minister necessarily embodies and personifies the nation's dominant mood at any given time or he does not last long, and in Pierre Trudeau's case the mood begins to reflect itself as in a shining mirror.

To Avoid Disaster

I don't mean that the nation accepts all his views, that he is right about everything or that he is especially popular at a time when all governments must be unpopular if they are to govern wisely. I mean only that in deciding overnight that the nation must return to economic sanity after a long detour he will deserve, and I think he will get, the people's support simply because there is no alternative except the "disaster" which he has finally discerned at the end of the present road.

For him, a rebel, a reformer and a disenchanted socialist, this is a bitter pill to swallow. That he has chosen to swallow it, along with many youthful illusions, is the measure of his size. As Laurier, the prime minister, first listened to Arthur Meighen, the young, unknown lieutenant of Robert Borden, he whispered to a colleague: "Well, Borden at last has found a man." So it turned out and so, I venture to believe, it is turning out now.

In the area of economics anyhow the nation has found a man — not a man it supposed in last year's election campaign but a far tougher man who, perhaps, has suddenly found himself. He has found that the nation's psychology, and his own, must change or it will soon be too late.

Up to the Majority

But the change in Mr. Trudeau and in his policies will not be sufficient. No leader and no policy can succeed unless the great silent majority of the nation understand and support them. With visible anguish the prime minister is trying to make us understand and blaming my own trade because we don't. Whether he has been fair to the "media" or not is a small matter. The important thing is that he has offered us a clear choice, in understandable figures, staked his political life on our verdict and, as never before in peacetime, has appealed to the highest of all courts, our national character.

Evidently he believes that the character has not changed nearly as much as a few riotous mobs would seem to indicate, that the old instinct is still there and well reappear in the crunch. He agrees, in this psychological test, with T. A. Crerar, a man of entirely different political views, and I submit that both of them are right. If they are wrong, God help us all. No one else will.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Hysterical Outburst

I note that our premier in one of his well-known hysterical outbursts blamed Mr. Berger for the most unwarranted attack on Mr. Trudeau during his recent visit to Vancouver. Our premier has obviously forgotten the vicious attack of Mr. Chant — one of his cabinet ministers — on the Canadian Prime Minister and the omnibus bill in the recent session of the Legislature. Such an attack was completely unwarranted as it had nothing to do with provincial affairs as the subjects covered were of federal jurisdiction.

I was present at the Legislature during this pious outburst of Mr. Chant and I must admit I was bitterly ashamed to think that Mr. Chant would make this attack when Mr. Trudeau was not in a position to defend himself. In view of this I would suggest to our premier that those in glasshouses should not throw stones.—W. P. B. Wrixon, 1254 Rockland.

Credit Where Due

Let us not lose sight of how much has been accomplished in our province since Social Credit was voted in, nor the jobs which have become available due to the foresight of a government that gets things done.

From Prince George we now have No. 16 Highway linking up Jasper and the Yellowhead route. This had been promised for years by the Liberals and Conservatives, but the Social Credit government made it a reality. The highways and the ferry system speak for themselves, to name but a few of the accomplishments in this vast province. Let's give credit where credit is due. — "A Booster."

Contempt for Constituents

Your recent editorial, "The Runaround" dealing with the Pat Bay Highway was well and timely spoken.

Your question of where the MLA has been is a choice one. It seems to me that about the time of the planning of the Rose and Blanshard Street extensions, our "Good Man For Saanich," by means of the local news media, informed one and all that he had information to the effect that there had been a leak in the then secret planned route of the new Pat Bay highway, and he would present it "tomorrow." There was land speculation going on and he would bare the facts. The facts never materialized and "our good man" was mysteriously quiet for some time to come.

However, others were not so quiet. There were suggestions of land speculations in other parts of the province and the eventual outcome was a change of jobs for the minister of highways.

Why would a government abruptly change its plans, with no reasonable explanation for doing so, and lay itself open to the severe criticism it has received? Could it be that "Honest John" was right and to prevent a public furore, the project had to be shelved?

Not too long ago, our government showed its concern for the City of Victoria by means of a hassle over sewage outfall into the Strait. Our "Good Man" entered the discussion by way of criticizing the mayor of Victoria. I doubt if ever an MLA was so deservedly publicly humiliated (by the mayor), for his lack of knowledge, on this and every other subject he comments on, as was our John.

Our provincial government has shown nothing but contempt for the constituents of Victoria and Saanich and The Islands. What is more contemptible still is that they have the gall to ask us, in Saanich and The Islands, to vote for "The Good Man" for Saanich again. — A. J. S.

"With Friends Like These . . ."

On Tuesday morning, August 12, 30,000 Victorians waited in the rain for buses that didn't come. The bus drivers were not on strike, but, following that peculiar code of honor of union members, the drivers would not cross the picket line set up by the oil workers union.

So 30,000 people missed medical and dental appointments; business appointments were cancelled; shopping schedules disrupted; and hundreds of workers were late for work.

If anyone were to ask for comments from those angry, stranded pedestrians, most of the comments would be unprintable.

The whole debacle points up the stupidity of laws which allow six men to cause loss and inconvenience to 30,000. The resulting public condemnation will undoubtedly spill over from the labor to the political scene and will be directed against the NDP which is so closely associated with the political power of the labor unions.

The point was very succinctly stated in the Times editorial column. "With such union friends, who, including Mr. Berger, needs enemies?"—Maurice Rookwood, 2464 Plumer.

Poor Pay

It has been announced that difficulty is being experienced in securing a sufficiency of personnel to handle the electoral procedures — and I don't wonder!

The staff is required to attend the polling station at least half an hour before the polls open at 8 a.m. (without leaving the building) throughout the polling day, which ends at 8 p.m., then remain to count ballots, complete statements, etc., before reporting back to the recruiting officer — a total of at least 14 hours, for what works out to about $1.57 per hour for DRO's and $1.28 for polling clerks.

In these inflationary days is the remuneration sufficiently attractive? Perhaps the authorities should take another long, hard look at the situation, which is not much of an example of "the good life"! — N. O. SOPE.

To Ease Two Problems

As a step towards solving two problems — Canadian surplus wheat and starvation among peoples of our world — perhaps you would be willing to print the following letter which could be clipped, signed and sent directly to the Prime Minister in Ottawa.

Dear Prime Minister Trudeau:

This is to inform you that as a Canadian taxpayer, I am willing to pay a sufficient increase in income tax to cover the cost of buying our surplus wheat for export to the underdeveloped nations of the world.—(Mrs.) Carole Punt, 1732 Newton.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times, Aug. 20, 1909.

A plea that the state should put "love in the law" for the treatment of juvenile offenders was the keynote of a most impressive address delivered by Judge Lindsay, of Denver, Col., at the city hall last night before an immense audience. The distinguished visitor to the city enjoys a wide reputation as "Boy's Friend", because of his successful work in the direction of the reformation of juvenile offenders.

Social Credit: Its Birth And Withering in Alberta

By L. ALEXANDER

What's in a name? "Social Credit" can mean many things to many people. For most of the younger voters in next week's election the origins will be obscure. It's interesting now to recall how it all began in our neighbor province and what happened to the original movement. L. Alexander is the pen-name of a long-time Alberta resident now working in British Columbia who was there and knew the men involved.

The first-time British Columbia voter will enter the booth on August 27 to make his mark for power or protest, but unless there is a relative or saint named on the ballot, he is unlikely to vote for the man rather than the party.

Properly played, that is the game. The party labels have a message but they will not tell him of the price paid to bring two of them to his ballot.

The young voter knows that Social Credit was not brought down from Mount Tolmie on tablets of fir, nor was it found in the bullrushes of Lake Okanagan. He will also accept as true that the New Democratic Party was not built by Mr. Strachan with the tools of his trade.

The labels are imports from Alberta where a political drama, without parallel in Canada, played for a decade. To us Ancients, who saw it happen, there is still discomfort in remembering that we were part of it.

Dozen Buildings Every 9 Miles

The Aberta of 1920 scattered its half-million people over a quarter-million square miles of plateau. Transport meant railway, production meant wheat, and towns were a dozen buildings at nine-mile intervals along the tracks.

All else was rural except the few larger towns that one could walk across in less than an hour.

If this high country had been populated by ordinary people the story would have been different. But they were Westerners who divided Canada into three parts.

From the Lakehead east lived a few peasants and the financiers of St. James and Bay Streets, who drained the west of its wealth, while they luxuriated in the shade of a high tariff wall.

From Winnipeg to the Rockies dwelt the hardy pioneer who provided Canada's real wealth.

Beyond the Rockies a subspecies picked apricots, netted fish and cut large trees. Generously, one thought of them as fellow Canadians, provided none was too pushy about it.

People who live on vertical real estate, resistant to the plow, can be ignored.

The Albertan was the most western of the Westerners. He was an instant creation. The man from the east had only to step from the train, and with the mud of Bruce County still on his boots, he sneered at the effete East.

One more item completes the picture, and starts the boil in the political pot. Sociologists characterized it as socio-economic homogeneity. This translates to one word: wheat. Drop a grain of wheat in Alberta's soil and a hundred days later one may have ten, twenty, or even thirty grains to harvest.

Nothing will prevent this happening except cut worms, rust, drought, frost, hail, late rains, grasshoppers and weeds. A good harvest would bring low prices and freight problems. Pay day was delivery day at the elevator, so the farmer was in debt most of the year.

Worst of all, he exported or perished. Local mills, animal feeders and moonshiners provided no significant market. His capital costs were high. Gang plows, seeders, binders and threshers were expensive.

In 1909 the farmers decided to do something about it. The United Farmers of Alberta (UFA) was formed and its Solomon, Henry Wise Wood, formulated a policy.

The essential thought was a simple one: animalistic competition must give way to human co-operation. Wood expanded this in scores of articles published by the "Grain Grower's Guide" and "The UFA". In one he wrote, "It will not fail. It cannot fail, because the Supreme Power . . . has the work in hand and will not let it fail."

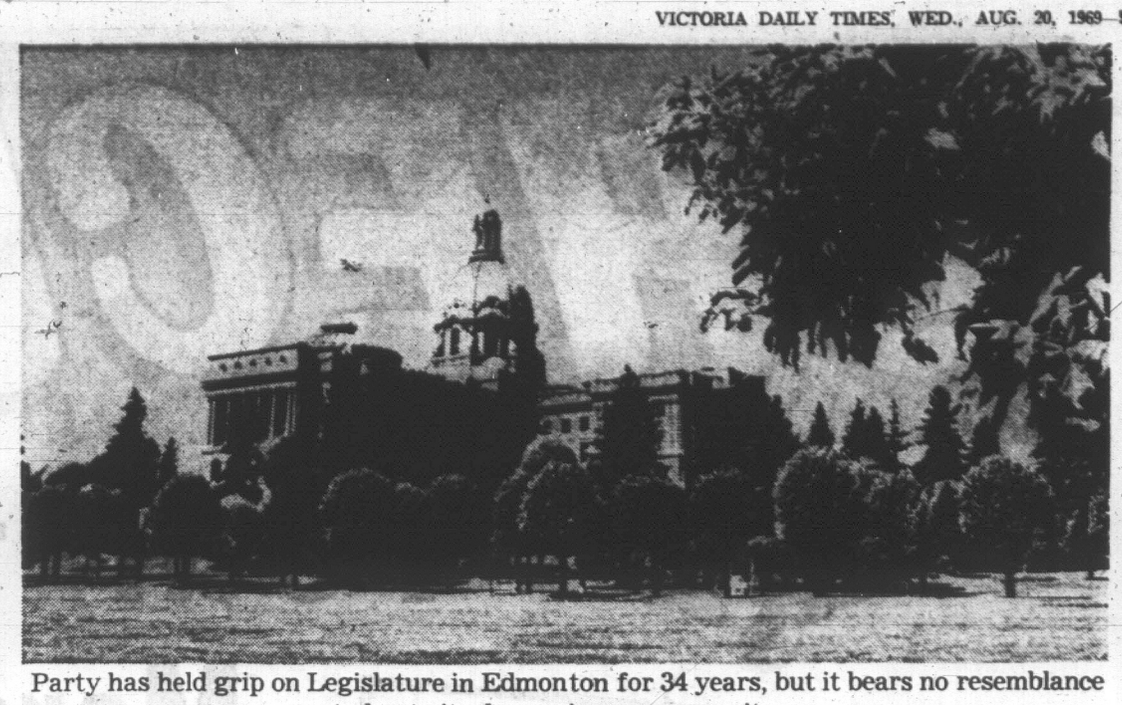

The UFA was more than Wood's philosophy. Every community formed a local. Meetings, picnics, dances, and nearly all community activities were sponsored by the local. Anyone could join, and where everyone was dependent on the farmer, there was identity of interest.

On thing they were not allowed: political activity as a party. Political parties compete, and that was anathema to the UFA creed. Anyway, it was not necessary. The Liberals had governed Alberta since formation in 1905, and one had only to go to them with reasonable requests.

The prosperity of the war years ended in 1920 and the natives were restless. Eastern co-operation was not evident. Over the protests of their leaders, the UFA formed a "movement" that swept the Liberals from power in 1921.

This "movement," that governed to 1935, was indistinguishable from the usual political party except for one thing: the delegate. When the UFA entered politics it had a ready-made organization. From the locals, the delegates met yearly in convention where they formulated policy that the cabinet was obliged to accept. This power slowly eroded over the next ten years, but the firm organization remained.

The UFA gave Alberta good government by the criterion of general satisfaction, but problems remained. The leaders looked to monetary reform for solutions. They studied all theories that came to their attention, including a strange one, Social Credit, associated with a Major C. H. Douglas of Britain, that guaranteed to eliminate poverty and war within five years of implementation.

Party has held grip on Legislature in Edmonton for 34 years, but it bears no resemblance today to its depression-era progenitor.

Intense Concern After the Crash

The Ottawa government examined Douglas in committee in 1923, and later the governments of Australia, New Zealand and the U.K. took his testimony. The UFA locals studied the theory, and supported by some of their leaders, brought it to the attention of the government in Edmonton.

Monetary reform, including Social Credit, held the farmers' interest until the disaster of 1929. It then became a matter of intense concern.

The depression struck Alberta cruelly. Prices fell harder than brokers to the pavement of Wall Street. At various times wheat sold for 19 cents a bushel, eggs for 4 cents a dozen, pigs for $2 (the whole pig), and hamburger for 5 cents a pound. A farmer at Myrnum backed a load of wheat to the bank's window and shovelled it to the floor.

Air pollution was frightening: for weeks the sun was obscured by blown top soil. Sand drifts covered machinery and blocked roads. Car radiators were plugged with grasshoppers, wild oats flourished, and pastures turned brown. The dead atmosphere of poverty crushed the spirit.

There was at least one Albertan who had no interest in monetary reform. William Aberhart, school principal, Dean of the Prophetic Bible Inistitute (Calgary), genius of organization, genius in the new art of radio communication, had other matters to occupy his attention.

His radio Sunday schools were nearly everywhere in the province. His adult listeners numbered above Jack Benny's. Albertans were largely fundamentalists in religion and the 35 fundamentalist sects had no deep theological differences. In mid-depression anybody's Better-World-to-Come had attractions not then found on the lone prairie.

No doubt Aberhart deplored poverty, but it was of this world which was, after all, the domain of Santa. A fellow teacher, Charles M. Scarborough, tried in 1929, to convert him to Social Credit but he resisted it firmly. Scarborough tried it again in 1932. It worked.

This genius in the arts of communication and organization welded a modified Social Credit to his religion, and placed the result firmly into the ready-made UFA locals and the homes of his radio audience. He brought hope to replace despair. The enthusiasm of his following was beyond belief.

Beyond Belief But Stood Alone

Aberhart's program was even further beyond belief, but it stood alone as the solution to problems that demanded immediate action.

From 1932 to the fall of 1934, Aberhart made it clear to his people that direct political action was not needed. The "movement" was to take its case to the UFA (then partly CCF), the Liberals and the Conservatives.

When he did so, the Conservatives rejected it totally. The Liberals promised to examine it and be eclectic about what they found. The UFA called Major Douglas and William Aberhart before the Agricultural Committee in March 1934, to discover what all the shouting meant.

Douglas had repudiated Aberhart's alleged orthodoxy before the hearings began, and he pointedly told the committee that no satisfactory plan for Alberta existed. Aberhart had already presented a detailed plan to the members along with his "green" book that explained it to anyone. A few days later, in Calgary, there was a bitter quarrel during one of the few times Douglas and Aberhart ever spoke to each other.

Albertans were now rushing lemming-like to their land of economic fantasy. Aberhart had no difficulty crushing opposition. The orthodox Douglasites, such as the New Age Club and Open Mind Club, were severe in their denunciation of Aberhart's apostasy, but he assured the followers that no unorthodoxy existed.

The big dailies, the economists, and the government raised voices of caution that were crushed by the prophet's ridicule. None of them guaranteed the abolition of poverty.

In a slow development from late 1934 to early 1935, the Aberhart Social Credit (the movement) became a political party.

The most impressive attempt to salvage something was made by the Economic Safety League. Founded in July 1935, by the Drumheller Board of Trade, it was joined by other major boards, and headed by a former lieutenant-governor. By radio, newspaper advertisements, and pamphlets, the league spelled out the dangers in the Douglas and Aberhart theories.

A measure of the maladies of the time is indicated by the League's undertaking to guard the identities of prospective members. With ease, the Social Credit speakers convinced the faithful that the League was in the pay of the "Fifty Big Shots" who governed Canada. Vancouver's Jerry McGeer and Elmore Philpot fared no better when they came to help.

At that point the man who mattered was the voter who could confer power. What he had heard fell on depression-wounded ears.

Give Adults $25 a Month

The man in Calgary promised to end poverty by giving each adult $25 a month; to eliminate debt; establish a "just" price; provide credit from provincial sources, and ensure the producer a profit. He told the voter not to worry about the means; the experts would be called to implement the plan.

The UFA contributions to the movement were generous. Its journals provided publicity, its locals were captured, and the government gave no cure-all alternative when they found Aberhart's plan unacceptable and Douglas' non-existent.

The final contribution from Edmonton began as whispers of scandal that named two cabinet ministers. Those who knew and respected the able intelligent, corporation lawyer, John E. Brownlee, premier since 1925, were confident that the wicked would soon suffer.

The next whisper generated bewilderment and trauma. Brownlee was accused of the seduction of pretty 18-year-old Vivian MacMillan, a student from a small town who lived with the Brownlees while continuing her education.

The case came to trial and was reported by the dailies in detail. Most of the testimony was predictable and not material for a new chapter of Kama Sutra. But the allegation that one incident occurred in the Brownlee bed while Mrs. Brownlee slept thoroughly shocked a numbed electorate. The jury found for the plaintiff but the judge, in an almost unprecedented move, rejected the verdict. The premier resigned.

Politically, all else was anti-climax. Social Credit became the sole force of significant magnitude. On August 22, 1935, the party won all but eight seats. The UFA was wiped out.

There was great rejoicing, but 18 months later Albertans had no more Social Credit than they have 34 years later in August, 1969.

The fade-out of Social Credit, both versions, was rapid and complete. Innate qualities that could survive like carvings of ice in Alberta's winter of discontent could not survive the heat of electoral success and political realty. They seeped into the gumbo.

CCF Manifesto Faded Slowly

The radical, depression-inspired CCF socialism of the Regina Manifesto faded more slowly. All party doctrine properly adapts to the times, but there was little recognizable of the Manifesto two decades later when Prime Minister St. Laurent described the CCF as, "Liberals in a hurry."

The labels came to British Columbia as imports, but the young voter might well give a moment's thought to the history that created them.

Events and time may have made them irrelevant as labels, but a generation paid dearly for them.

Easing the Steepness Of the Generation Gap

By ART STOTT

Last Sunday a couple of dozen Victoria parents drove their small boys up to Nanaimo to win the Vancouver Island "Tyke" lacrosse championships in two classes. The local youngsters, all under eight, ran like deer, fired so many shots in the general direction of the opposing net that they piled up impressive scores and justified the encouragement they had received from their fathers and mothers.

Stott

The teams were pretty chesty when the show was over and immensely proud of being champions.

The boys were too young, I suppose, to realize how much their parents had contributed to their triumphs. At their age the thought scarcely occurs to them that fathers and mothers had given up time they might have spent on themselves, had put up with inconvenience during the season as they drove youngsters to and from games, made weekend plans to conform to the demands of the schedule and served meals to accommodate the tykes. They may have a hazy idea that they owe something to the people who coached and managed their clubs and the officials who ran the league for them, but the concepts, at their time of life, would be nebulous.

On the other hand, the parents made their sacrifices, it seems to me, the way good parents usually do. These were their youngsters and it was part of family to see that they enjoyed the opportunity to play a game under satisfactory conditions.

A man one step beyond this parent-and-son relationship came away from the event with the conviction that no generation gap existed between the adults cheering in the stands and the boys playing their hearts out in the lacrosse box. The cohesion was complete.

Yet, sometime between two and ten years from now, there will be a loosening of the bonds between the fathers and mothers and their sons in a perfectly natural growing-up process for the latter. There always has been and always will be. The kids will want to flex muscles of independence. They will be endowed with the wordly wisdom of the teens. They will realize that fathers and mothers are not infallible, not omniscient. New fads will claim their attention. The securities of home will seem less essential. They'll want to be among children of their own age, though they'll still have some heroes a little older. They'll be intent on making the mistakes of inexperience inevitable when they branch out on their own.

Sentimental parents will probably feel the wrench of this separation. Wise ones will take it in stride, recognizing it for what it is — the flight of the fledglings. And, in due course, if the parents belong to the lucky majority, the youngsters will reach a maturity which brings appreciation for the virtues in fathers and mothers that are discounted in adolescence.

For better or for worse, the maturing sons and daughters will start to take on characteristics of their own parents, partly through heredity, partly through the process of time, which is on the side of conservativism.

They, in turn, will sacrifice their own interests for their offspring — disorganizing the home schedule to adjust to the demands of a tyke's lacrosse league, or some other activity infinitely more important than a fixed dinner hour or a weekend on the golf course. And in the process they'll be nearing the next generation gap when their sons and daughters take off on the road to inexperienced youghful independence.

To an older person, watching parents cheering their small sons at Nanaimo last weekend, it seemed that the families represented were engaged in an exercise which would make the edges of the generation gap less precipitous. They were giving the youngsters encouragement and affection. Those gifts can never be taken away. Much as the generations may seem to move apart in the next decade or so, the encouragement and affection will provide for the young independents a sort of anchor in the drift of their times.

●

The small boys in the red and white uniforms winning for Victoria, and the equally small players in green representing Nanaimo, could not know that. The Victorians could see only the trophy. So it has been for hundreds of other youngsters in scores of other activities. The trophy is a thing of metal, important as a symbol of achievement. But it will be years before the young competitors recognize the basic gift bestowed upon them — whether they won or lost.

McKay-Cormack

A reorganization of McKay-Cormack Holdings Ltd. enabling control by Buval Mines industrial complex is expected to be approved soon, reports spokesman Ralph Stromberg.

Another firm, Dickinson's Ltd., Burnaby-based manufacturing company, also will be merged with the Buval group, which is arranging $250,000 financing to open a new plant in Toronto to make a new smokeless oil burner.

The burner, for hot water tanks and furnaces, was invented by Dickinson president E. C. Robinson. It can function efficiently with low grade fuels, achieving 84 to 86 per cent combustion. Shell Canada is negotiating for part of the initial production.

Utica

Utica Mines Ltd. has begun a $35,000 diamond drilling program on its silver property, 35 miles northeast of Butte, Mont.

The Vancouver-based company said it recently spent more than $100,000 on surface-stripping, trench-cutting and bulk sampling on the property and estimates the property contains at least 12.5 million tons of ore averaging $13.50 per ton in silver and gold.

A geologist's report said copper, lead and zinc are also present in a 6,000-foot-long section varying in width from 12 to 35 feet. Total length of the vein is about 15,000 feet.

Sterling

A net profit of $161,141 or 28.5 cents a share is reported for the first six months of 1969 by Sterling Trusts Corp., a gain of 6 per cent over $152,181 (27 cents) in the same time in 1968.

Gross revenue at 13 per cent more than in the comparable like at first.

Okanagan

Okanagan Investments Ltd. will merge with Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd. on Sept. 30, said W. Thomas Brown.

He said directors of Okanagan will join the Odlum Brown board. They include president J. Bruce Smith, who is a director of Home Oil Distributors Ltd. and the Bank of B.C.

Road Contract

The Edmonton firm of Columbia Bithuletic has been awarded a $1.2 million contract for paving a section of the Hudson's Hope road.

The contract covers 32 miles between Hudson's Hope and Fort St. John in the Peace River district.

Aquitaine

Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd. reports net income of $2.88 million or 17.3 cents a share in the first six months of 1969, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the $1.9 million or 13.6 cents a share earned in the same period of 1968.

Net cash from operations exceeded $3.5 million, compared with $2.34 million last year.

Mine Firms Prepared To Negotiate

LUSAKA (Reuters) — Two giant copper-mining corporations said Tuesday they are prepared to negotiate with the Zambian government over its plan to purchase 51 per cent of the shares held by their operating companies.

The firms were Roan Selection Trust—80 per cent owned by Americans with American Metal Climas the biggrst shareholder—and Anglo-American Corp., whose shares are held mainly in South Africa or by British investors.

A statement issued by Roan said its boards have agreed to negotiate and an Anglo-American statement simply said it would negotiate.

They were reacting to a takeover plan announced by President Kenneth Kaunda Aug. 11,which he said was in keeping with his policy that Zambia must control its economic destiny.

U.S., Peru Set Talks On Seizure

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States and Peru will resume talks next week on the dispute over the expropriation of the American-owned Internationa Petroleum Co.

Presidential envoy John N. Irwin II, who led the U.S. delegation in the two previous rounds of talks, will arrive in Lima on Monday, the state department announced Tuesday.

After Irwin's first visit to Lima, the U.S. on April 7 deferred indefinitely any invocation of the Hickenlooper Amendment, which requires a cutoff of U.S. aid within six months to a country that expropriates American property without taking "appropriate steps" toward compensation.

The main IPC properties were taken last Oct. 9, shortly after the Peruvian military took power in a coup.

IPC's administrative appeal against a $690 million government claim was the legal basis for the deferral of the Hickenlooper provision in April. As expected, that appeal was rejected Aug. 6 by President Juan Velasco Alvarado. The following day, the state department announced that the Irwin mission would resume at the end of the month.

Since then, department spokesmen have said progress of the Irwin talks would help determine whether the "appropriate steps" were being taken.

The new U.S. ambassador to Peru, Taylor G. Belcher, will arrive in Lima on Sunday.

Coasting Trade Probe Terms Set by Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal transport department announced Tuesday terms of reference for a special inquiry into laws regulating the Canadian coasting trade.

In the past the coasting trade, the transport of passengers and goods between Canadian ports, has been reserved for Commonwealth or Irish vessels. Traffic between ports on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River system has been limited to Canadian-registered vessels.

The inquiry, to be conducted by the Canadian transport commission, will determine whether such activities as dredging, salvage and servicing of off-shore drilling rigs should be subject to coasting trade regulations.

It will also examine the effect of international agreements on provisions governing the coasting trade.

$30 Million Hotel Planned in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Construction of a new 44-storey, $30 million hotel downtown is scheduled to begin early next year, it has been announced.

However, some aspects of the project, expected to be completed in 1972, have yet to receive civic approval.

The hotel is to contain 500 rooms and 300 luxury suites. On top, at a height of 500 feet, will be a revolving restaurant, a lounge and an observation dock.

The project, designed by Toronto architect Raymond Moriyama, will be developed by Dynam Development Corp. Ltd., which will later become part of the Dynam Group of Vancouver.

SHARP REVENUE BOOST REPORTED BY CP AIR

VANCOUVER (CP)—Canadian Pacific Airlines Tuesday reported transportation revenue of $63.2 millions for the first six months of 1969, an increase of 31 per cent over the $48.2 millions recorded during the same period last year.

Company president John C. Gilmer said passenger revenue for the half year of $52 million, an increase of $14.04 million over 1968, accounted for about four-fifths of total revenue.

He said earnings from cargo traffic were $5.4 million, from mail revenue $3.5 million, and from the company's resumed charter program $2.3 million.

B.C. Bank Assets Up $12 Million

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia had assets of $56,000,000 as of July 31, an increase of $12,000,000 since the end of the second quarter April 30, president Albert E. Hall announced Tuesday.

The quarterly reports do not include a profit and loss statement, but Mr. Hall said the bank's profit is rising.

The bank opened July 18, 1968, with the $1,700,000 subscribed capital constituting its assets.

"I speculated that we might reach $50,000,000 in two years and here we are with $56,000,000," Mr. Hall said. "We have 25,000 accounts."

Deposits at July 31 compared with last Oct. 31 totalled $43.23 million up more than 100 per cent from $20.64 million.

Shareholders' equity was given as the same, or $12.48 million, including $7.35 million in the rest account and $29,390 in undivided profits.

The bank has two branches in Vancouver, one in Victoria and one in New Westminster. Two more Vancouver branches open this month, a second in Victoria Sept. 19 and one in Nanaimo Oct. 1. Mr. Hall said a branch is being built in Kamloops and branches for Prince George and Kelowna are in the planning stage.

Japanese Firms Prosper

NEW YORK (AP) — Profits of 200 large non-United States corporations listed by Fortune Magazine showed a 24.6 per cent profit gain in 1968 — nearly double that registered by Fortune's 500 biggest U.S. industrials.

Total sales of the foreign firms rose 12.4 per cent from the previous year, according to the magazine.

Other increases were 20 French concerns, 11.1 per cent; 25 German companies 10.7 per cent, and 43 British firms, 3.5 per cent, which represented the smallest gain.

1. Royal Dutch-Shell Group, Netherlands-Britain, $9,200,000,000.
2. Unilever, Britain-Netherlands, $5,500,000,000.
3. British Petroleum, Britain, $3,300,000,000.
4. Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI), Britain, $2,900,000,000.
5. Volkswagenwerk, West Germany, $2,900,000,000.
6. Philips Gloeilampenfabrieken, Netherlands, $2,700,000,000.

8. Montecatini Edison, Italy, $2,300,000,000.
9. National Coal Board, Britain, $2,300,000,000.
10. Hitachi, Japan $2,300,000,000.

All were on Fortune's top list in 1967 except Hitachi and British Steel, which was formed in July, 1967.

For comparison, General Motors, the largest on the list of U.S. industrials recorded 1968 sales of $22,800,000,000, and U.S. Steel — No. 10 on the list — reported sales of $4,500,000,000.

Acute Shortage in Nickel Could Bring Price Boost

TORONTO (CP) — A strike-caused shortage of nickel, a strategic metal in North American, European and Japanese industry, could have far-reaching effects, the most notable being a substantial price jump to users.

The shortage began about seven weeks ago when 16,000 members of the United Steel Workers of America left their jobs at the largest nickel producer in the Western world, International Nickel Co. of Canada.

The shortage will become more acute if 3,200 workers at Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., Canada's second largest producer, go on strike as they may do Thursday.

Falconbridge last year produced 70,000,000 pounds of the metal and, with Inco's 480,000,000 pounds, supplied more than half the nickel consumed in the Western world and Japan.

SHORT SUPPLY

The increased price already has developed in the so-called "grey market" where a pound of the metal now is selling for $4. The world price, agreed to last December by major manufacturers, is $1.03 U.S. a pound, or $1.11 Canadian.

Most users now are getting only 35 per cent of their pre-strike requirements and other sources of supply are becoming increasingly costly or difficult to obtain.

Affected by the shortage will be a wide range of industrial and construction items, ranging from automobiles to supermarket pushcarts, bathroom fixtures to jet engines, coffee pots to food processing equipment.

Specialist steel makers, who use nickel in stainless steel, now are refusing orders for high nickel-bearing steels and are switching to alloys requiring a lower nickel content.

Allocation of the available supply of nickel has been organized by the federal government since a world shortage developed three years ago. Officially, Canadian users are limited to 100 per cent of their 1966 usage, but with the addition of new users and government permission for the producers to supply some consumers with additional requirements, consumption of nickel has increased in Canada from the 1966 level of 1,500,000 pounds a month to 2,200,000 a month.

Miracle Coating REPLACES PAINT

Another boon to the space age has been accomplished for home and apartment owners; an exterior wall coating so tough and durable it is guaranteed to totally eliminate exterior painting for over 15 years. This remarkable product combines the long-lasting properties of fiberglas, asbestos, mica and perlite to make a wall surface that resists all climatic extremes. 16 colors available.

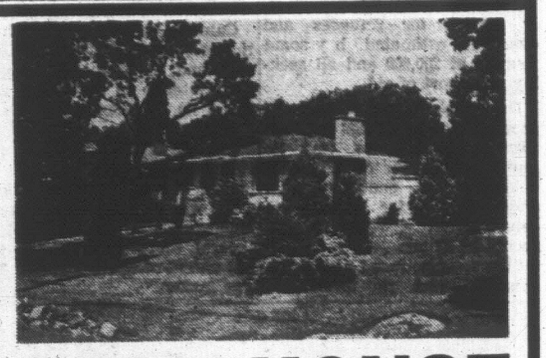

Guided missile manufacturers for the United States government have found this material a superior product for insulation of heat shields used in the space program. Over two million world-wide applications have been made on industrial, commercial and residential buildings since 1946.

Applied With A Gun

"Fiberglas" Textured Coating is applied with heavy-duty spray equipment under high pressure. It fuses itself to the wall surface to a thickness of 20 times that of paint. It remains flexible and withstands cracking and surface expansion and contraction. Every application is registered and factory-guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, peeling or flaking.

Free information on how easily you may have "Fiberglas" Textured Coating applied now at low bank terms, with no down payment, may be obtained by calling direct or collect to Textured Coating Division.

Malaria Threat Follows Camille As Death Toll Climbs to 230

GULFPORT, Miss. (CP) — The threat of malaria added new problems today on the Mississippi Gulf Coast where weary rescue teams still searched for bodies in the trail of destruction left by Hurricane Camille.

The Mississippi-Louisiana death count from the monster storm stood at 237.

"They have unconfirmed reports that between 180 and 185 dead have been found on the Mississippi Gulf Coast," the state's civil defence headquarters in Jackson said today.

C. P. Wimberly, administrator at the Gulfport Memorial Hospital, said "there is malaria in the regular city water at this time."

Water tankers moved into the stricken coast from New Orleans, Baton Rouge, La., and other nearby points. New Orleans sent 13,000 gallons in tank cars while Baton Rouge shipped 15,000 gallons. But this was hardly enough for refugees and evacuees estimated by some sources at 200,000 and all seeking some sort of aid.

Dr. Frank Wiygul, director of general health services for Mississippi, said there was no immediate danger of a typhoid epidemic but cautioned that only boiled water or that received from a relief agency should be drunk.

"We are also faced with a fly, mosquito and rat problem," said Joe Brown, Mississippi sanitary engineering director. Freighters wrenched from their moorings in the Gulfport harbor during the storm slammed into a catfood factory, spilling its stores and attracting rats.

Governor John Bell Williams of Mississippi said Tuesay that "some people estimate the death rate could go up to above 500 and possibly reach 1,000."

Uncounted thousands were injured and more than 200,000 were homeless.

Limited martial law was declared by Williams and National Guard troops patrolled ruined communities to halt looting.

INSPECT THE AREA

Vice-President Spiro Agnew and George Romney, secretary of housing and urban development, were to join Williams on an aerial inspection of the devastated area in which the governor predicted total damage "might perhaps go beyond $1,000,000,000."

Camille, the most intense hurricane ever to hit the American mainland, sideswiped the southeastern edge of Louisiana and raged on to Mississippi's coast Sunday night.

Two days later, some areas still had not been reached by rescue crews. Communications were erratic, sometimes non-existent. Officials said it might be several more days before the full extent of death and damage was known.

Camille also caused severe damage in Louisiana and Alabama.

President Nixon declared Mississippi and Louisiana major disaster areas, earmarking $1,000,000 in federal aid for each state to help repair the devastation.

Sporadic looting was reported Tuesday in Mississippi communities as thieves sneaked through police lines and robbed battered stores and homes.

KEEPS PEOPLE AWAY

Maj.-Gen. Walter Johnston, commanding officer of the state troops, limited access to those on official business only.

Rescue workers said their major problem was moving heavy wreckage to get at the victims. They also complained of a lack of supplies.

The air force moved more than 300 tons of supplies to the area from Georgia. The material had to be airlifter in because all the roads are blocked and most of the bridges out.

The three towns hit the hardest appeared to be Pass Christian, Biloxi and Gulfport, all in Mississippi.

Most of the victims were in Pass Christian, between the Gulf of Mexico and Bay St. Louis. They included 23 persons who held a "hurricane party" in a new brick apartment building. The building collapsed.

All piers from Pascagoula, Miss., to the Louisiana border, a stretch of 115 miles, were destroyed.

Two of Mississippi's best known resort hotels, the Buena Vista in Biloxi and the Broadwater Beach in Gulfport, were heavily damaged. Water in both was eight feet high in the lobby.

Three hundred patients in the Veterans Administration hospital in Gulfport were evacuated to Tuscaloosa, Ala., by the air force.

In Mobile, Ala., the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said men and equipment were being sent into begin opening roads and streets clogged with heavy wreckage and debris.

Emergency telephone and power repair crews collected from nearby states struggled to restore communications along the coastal strip.

Army generators were ordered airlifted in to provide temporary power for Gulfport's water pumping plant. The scarcity of drinking water was a serious problem everywhere in the devastated area.

Truckloads of food rumbled in. Mercy flights of vital supplies and medicine were organized. In New Orleans, a light plane carrying medical supplies crashed on takeoff, killing the four men aboard.

Insurance claims resulting from Camille will total about $100,000,000, the Insurance Information Institute estimated.

Captain Pleads Not Guilty

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The captain of the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne pleaded not guilty today to charges that he was partly responsible for his ship's collision with the American destroyer Frank E. Evans.

Capt. John P. Stevenson appeared before a courtmartial board of five senior officers. He is charged with failing to give the destroyer a "positive" direction after he determined it was on a collision course and with failing to put the carrier's engines astern when he determined the collision could not be avoided by action of the destroyer alone.

The court met for 38 minutes, then adjourned until Saturday.

The two ships collided June 3 during manoeuvres in the South China Sea. The carrier cut the destroyer in two and 74 U.S. sailors were lost.

Control Unit For Penticton

OTTAWA (CP)—A traffic control unit will be set up at the airport at Penticton, by the end of September, the Transport Department announced Tuesday.

Volume of traffic at the community has grown and its location, in a mountain-ringed valley, has aggravated the need for positive traffic control, the department said.

PHONE WORKERS FIRED

Three Nanaimo telephone workers alleged to have taken part in an assault on management personnel Aug. 4 were fired by B.C. Telephone Co. Tuesday.

The fight, which put two company supervisors in hospital, took place several hours after settlement of a 42-day strike of phone workers in the B.C. Tel system. The supervisors had worked during the strike.

G. F. Auchinleck, Vancouver Island manager of the company, said the company inquired into the incident and decided to discharge the three, one of whom faces an assault charge laid by RCMP. He is an officer of the Federation of Telephone Workers Nanaimo local.

The manager said they had all received letters in which behavior the night of Aug. 4 was cited and saying that they were being "dismissed for cause."

Auchinleck said recognized grievance procedure was available to each if they wished to protest.

According to the company, two supervisors were "rather badly hurt." Five or six management men were involved in the fracas, which occurred as they returned from their shift to the Nanaimo hotel where they lived during the strike.

"We have taken a look at what happened that night and decided the conduct of at least three people warrants dismissal," Auchinleck said.

One of the three was interviewed at length before he was discharged.

Kills Two

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (AP) — A former serviceman went on a shooting spree early today, using a high-powered rifle to kill two men and wound three others while walking along a city street, police said.

Police Chief Gale Smith said David L. Grimm, 25, was arraigned on a charge of murder after police armed with rifles and tear gas surrounded his house and brought him out.

GOVERNMENT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL A SHARED RESPONSIBILITY

The protection and control of our natural physical environment is everybody's responsibility. Coordinating this protection and control is the responsibility of the Government of British Columbia. When the British Columbia Government enacted pollution control legislation in 1956, it was one of the first governments in North America to do so. Today, administrative responsibility for the protection of our natural environment is with the Pollution Control Board.

To carry out this responsibility for pollution control, the Government of British Columbia needs the cooperation of municipal and district governments, industry and the public. Keeping in mind the technological and economic problems of industry especially in heavily populated municipalities and districts and the need to control pollution effectively, the Government of British Columbia:

- provides a tax abatement to taxpayers for land and equipment used for pollution control;
- assists industry with engineering, scientific and technical consultation; and
- passed legislation to provide municipalities with financial assistance equal to 75% of amortization costs above a 2 mill levy for the construction of sewage treatment facilities.

The objectives of the Government of British Columbia are the preservation of our natural physical environment, fish and wildlife, the protection of public health, and the development of recreational facilities, all without unduly impeding industrial growth and employment opportunities.

MP Backs Marina Rescue Bid

Victoria member of parliament David Groos said Tuesday Oak Bay marina operator Bob Wright should be reimbursed when his rescue boat is called out by the Air-Sea Rescue Centre in Vancouver.

He said he intends to take the matter up with the ministers of transport and defence when he returns to Ottawa Sept 7 "It requires some negotiations between the two departments."

Wright recently was refused payment on a $22.50 bill for a rescue in which the lives of two boys were saved. He was told by a coast guard official the money should be paid by the persons rescued.

Groos said he disagreed with this.

The federal government has never adopted the policy that persons rescued should pay the costs. Imagine the cost of rescuing a downed airman in northern British Columbia! We spend millions of dollars a year on this kind of operation."

He said the battle between federal departments and marina operators plagued with rescue calls "was bound to come to a head, sooner or later" and commended the Oak Bay Marina on its sea rescue work.

DIVORCES

Janet Allison Davies, 1841 Chestnut Street, from Michael David Davies, 467 Lampson Street. They were married at Victoria in 1967.

A few divorces, held over from the last session, are being heard during August. The regular divorce court session will be resumed in September.

Union Jack Disappears

A Union Jack with sentimental value has been stolen from a flag pole outside the Royal Oak Hotel in Saanich.

Ald. Foster Isherwood, whose family owns the hotel, said the flag disappeared at the weekend. It flew alongside the Canadian flag and the B.C. flag.

The Union Jack was owned by John Oliver, a former Saanich councillor, who at one time owned a farm where the motel stands. He gave the flag to the Isherwoods.

Isherwood said he would be happy if the person who stole it would just quietly return it—leaving it at the back of the flag stand "or even running it up on the flagpole in the middle of the night."

Suspects Arrested

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Tuesday arrested two suspects in connection with a $16,000 holdup July 31 of a Royal Bank of Canada branch in North Vancouver. They were turned over to the RCMP for questioning.

CARYL THE BUNNY

HOP AND A SKIP FOR A BUNNY GIRL

NEW YORK (AP) — As a Playboy bunny, Caryl Goldman's stock in trade was tips. Now, 14 months later, her tips in trade are stocks. She's a registered representative at a brokerage house.

The road from the Playboy Penthouse, where bunny-suited hostesses work mainly for tips, to the world of Wall Street and high finance may seem long.

But to raven-haired Miss Goldman it was only a hop, skip and a jump.

"I quit after three years at the club, started as a trainee at Newburger, Loeb & Co., and now here I am," she says, glancing at the electronic stock quotes illuminating the wall above her desk.

She is five feet tall and completely feminine, but doesn't seem out of place in the "board room" filled with some 40 men and only one other woman.

"I first got interested in stocks when my father died. He left my mother a lot of securities and I got very involved in investing them for her.

"After a while, I decided I might as well get in the business and started applying at different brokers."

Miss Goldman, 28, deals primarily with large investment accounts and traders, taking buy-and-sell orders on the phone and keeping a close watch on the progress of various stocks.

Trudeau Charge Decision Due On Friday

VANCOUVER (CP)—A high school dropout said under oath Tuesday that Prime Minister Trudeau hit him during an anti-Vietnam war demonstration here Aug. 8.

Richard Bruce Jesmer, 17, a laborer from Niagara Falls, Ont., was testifying in support of the complaint he swore out here Aug. 11, charging Mr. Trudeau with common assault.

Justice of the Peace Don Stewart, 28, later reserved decision until Friday as to whether he considers the charge should be proceeded with and whether Mr. Trudeau should be brought here to face it in court.

Jesmer, testifying at Mr. Stewart's preliminary hearing to determine if there is a prima facie case of common assault, said Mr. Trudeau hit him after he called the prime minister "a . . . creep."

"It was," said Jesmer, demonstrating a straightarm blow, "a cross between a push and a punch." He said it was delivered with an open palm after the prime minister "had moved towards me."

DIDN'T SEE A BLOW

Sub-Insp. Victor G. P. Irving, in charge of RCMP security for the prime minister, said he was close to Mr. Trudeau at the time of the alleged assault and did not see Mr. Trudeau hit anyone.

Mr. Trudeau was not represented at the hearing. But three police officers testified as "friends of the court" after Jesmer and three other youths gave evidence before Mr. Stewart.

Jesmer alleges the assault took place while Mr. Trudeau was moving through the crowd of demonstrators to attend a $50-a-plate Liberal party fund-raising dinner in the Seaforth Armories.

Mr. Stewart asked Jesmer why he had laid the charge. Jesmer answered, almost inaudibly, that "it is a criminal offence."

If Mr. Stewart decides Friday that prosecution should proceed, he can issue a summons or warrant requiring Mr. Trudeau to appear in court in Vancouver.

Common assault carries a maximum penalty of two years if handled by indictment. The maximum, if handled by the less serious summary conviction procedure, is a $500 fine or six months or both.

OTHERS TESTIFY

After Jesmer gave his low-pitched evidence before Mr. Stewart and an audience of 50, there followed these witnesses:

—Frederick John Stow, 18, Mississauga, Ont., who after declining to take an oath on religious grounds, said he could see Mr. Trudeau clearly and "I could see him strike Mr. Jesmer."

—Gerald Boulter, 22, Barrie, Ont., who quoted Mr. Trudeau as saying something like "oh, I'd like to get somebody" and added that "I saw him hit somebody in the crowd about eight feet away."

—Dan Coughlin, 17, also of Niagara Falls, who testified: "The prime minister went by and gave him a straightarm in the face."

—Det. Robert M. Welsh, Vancouver City Police, who said of Jesmer: "This person was very violent and shoving towards Pierre Elliot Trudeau. I observed somebody either push him (Jesmer) or grab him away."

—Insp. F. C. (Bud) Errington, Vancouver City Police, who described the crowd as "almost hysterical" and said he himself had been spat upon in the face.

—Insp. Irving, who testified: "I pushed several people aside and I did not see the prime minister strike anybody. . . . I believe I was probably in the best position of anybody there to see whether the prime minister struck anybody."

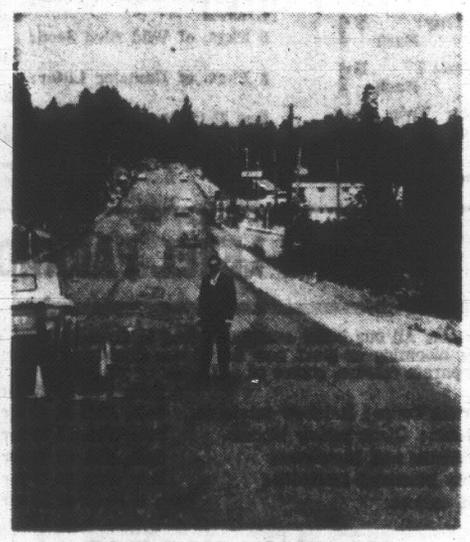

That position, said Insp. Irving, was right behind Mr. Trudeau, literally shoving him through the crowd.

Cross-examined by Leo McGrady, Jesmer's counsel, the RCMP man said his eyes could have been off Mr. Trudeau "momentarily" while pushing people out of the way.

Campaign Drafted

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Government Employees Association has approved a campaign aimed at winning the right of collective bargaining for provincial civil servants. First stage will involve educating the BCGEA's 13,000 members about collective bargaining, theme of the BCGEA's annual convention Oct. 3-4 in Prince George.

'Beautiful People' Hassle McGeer

McGeer was there to eat a box lunch and speak to supporters.

The young people were there because they almost always are there.

One young man who identified himself as Jim Batt told McGeer he was like all politicians.

"You go around the question, man. You're not giving them a choice."

"We shouldn't let the beautiful people disturb us," shouted McGeer.

Then one of the young people asked McGeer what he would do about keeping the province's resources in B.C.

McGeer said advanced secondary industry was the answer, and suggested industries making computers, chemicals, optic products and drugs for the Victoria area.

★

"What about the barrier between youth and the older people?" Batt asked. "What about the generation gap?"

"There is no generation gap," replied McGeer and one young girl agreed with him.

The discussion became an exercise in semantics. Batt declared that words were useless as a form of communication.

"What is society?" asked one young lady.

Batt spoke up again, insisting there is a generation gap.

"I think it's a problem in your mind," McGeer countered.

Saanich and the Island's Liberal candidate, Louis Lindholm was asked by a youth if he would be ashamed to have the square's hippies come to the riding to work for him.

Lindholm invited them to come and canvass any time.

McGeer and his party began to make their way from the square, shaking hands with some, nodding at others. The Liberal supporters applauded politely.

Curtis Scores Liaison Lack On Pat Bay Road

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis today accused the provincial government of a complete lack of co-operation regarding plans for the Patricia Bay Highway.

"We have been shown old plans for the eventual route, but each year brings new developments along with it to make us wonder."

Curtis said the municipality must get its information from provincial reaction to rezoning requests by developers within a half mile of the highway.

'NON-PARTISAN'

"We are learning more about the route through approvals by the province of new developments than by any liaison."

Curtis emphasized he was meeting McGeer as a non-partisan mayor and had met earlier NDP leader Tom Berger and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

He refused to say which meeting impressed him most and said he was encouraged by all of them.

'OOZING BACKYARDS'

"We must clean up land pollution. We've got youngsters playing in oozing backyards."

He was critical of the surplus accumulated by the government in the light of pressing municipal needs.

McGeer said a Liberal government would rewrite the Municipal Act.

"Both power and financial means must be placed in the hands of municipal governments," he said.

Pensioner Protests Book Fines

Five cents a day is too much to ask old-age pensioners to pay for books overdue from the Victoria Public Library, the library board was told in a letter Tuesday.

Old people, who because of "circumstances beyond their control" can't get to the library in time with their returned books shouldn't be fined the "inflationary cost" of five cents, wrote Jennie Waugh, 71, of 2633 Shelbourne.

Miss Waugh, a pensioner, said she hoped fines would be reduced to one cent a day for old people on low fixed incomes.

The fine is not a problem for young people who earn high wages, Miss Waugh said.

At one time the fine for each overdue book from the library was two cents a day.

But the reduction wasn't really necessary, said librarian John Lort, because the rule isn't absolutely inflexible. Fines can be deferred if a book borrower contacts the library to say he is ill or otherwise quite unable to bring the books back.

Boys Admit Playing With Matches Near Mill

Three boys, aged 10, 11 and 12, have told Saanich police they were playing with matches near sawdust bins at the Van Isle Moulding & Millwork, Ltd., mill which burned down Saturday night.

Damages to the Del Monte Avenue mill, which employed 40 men, were estimated at $500,000.

The boys were brought to police by their parents after the father of one recognized a newspaper description of his son's bicycle. He alerted the other boys' parents.

"The parents were most co-operative, though naturally upset," said Insp. Harry Adams.

The Election . . . Oak Bay

Cat-and-Mouse Time Again Behind the Tweed Curtain

By JOHN MIKA

The rest of British Columbia may be in the throes of a provincial election struggle but in Oak Bay it's just time to play that old cat-and-mouse game again.

The cat — a purring, powerful specimen — is none other than Premier Bennett, the riding's own most famous resident.

The election may send other ridings into an orgy of ideology, issues and debates but Oak Bay has always stood four-square for free enterprise and tradition. The "socialism or Social Credit" gambit has been irrelevant — as the abysmal returns for each succeeding left-wing candidate have shown.

●

Instead, the election writ only raises anew the excitement-tingling question: from which direction will the pussycat pounce this time?

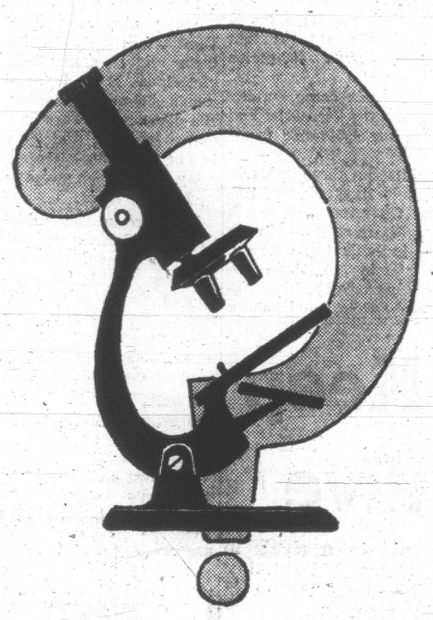

And the campaign will only decide whether the mouse will be caught at last.

Whatever the outcome on Aug. 27 Premier Bennett will be able to say truthfully that he has tried everything.

Because in the 1969 campaign he has entered a Social Creidt candidate dressed in enemy colors — another mouse, that roars, so to speak.

Will it work? Oak Bay voters will decide.

The Oak Bay that conjures the "Tweed Curtain" image and the Oak Bay that sends a member to the B.C. legislature are two different things.

For example: the municipality, with a population of roughly 19,000, had, by 1967 figures, 21 per cent — three times the national average — of its residents over the age of 65.

A capital region planning board report says fewer than 6,000 of these residents work. Of these, 40 per cent hold professional or managerial positions (Oak Bay has the highest median wage in Greater Victoria) but only 800 of the total work in Oak Bay. The rest head downtown.

But while the municipality itself has only 19,000 souls, the population of the political constituency is much greater, and has 23,992 voters this year.

This is because Oak Bay riding has a big chunk of Saanich municipality to contend with. Most of it was tacked on in the 1966 redistribution which added the Gordon Head area and brought the riding to 10 square miles.

It's hard to label because it is one of the Island's — and the province's — fast-growth areas. In what seems only a decade it has changed from a rural outskirt to a suburban bedroom.

And in that bedroom (it's occupants are not precisely counted) sleep a lot of young families in new houses; expensive houses with two-car garages and newly-seeded lawns and little children on their way to jamming schools.

Oak Bay's first member, elected in 1941, was widely-known Conservative Herbert Anscomb who served until 1952.

●

HOW THEY VOTED IN 1966

Macfarlane, Alan (L)	8,118
Ennals, Charles (SC)	5,808
Yarwood, Myra (NDP)	976

And the byelection, 1968

Cox, Allan (L)	7,892
Pollen, Peter (SC)	4,678
Yardwood, Myra (NDP)	654

In 1952, Social Credit and the CCF combined to demolish the old-line parties in the province's most dramatic political upheaval.

Tory Oak Bay, however, utterly ignored the radicals and decided that fair play demanded giving the Liberals a turn at bat. In the subsequent three elections it returned Liberal Archie Gibbs as its MLA.

●

The cat-and-mouse game started in the 1953 election. Flushed with his Cinderella-style success, Premier Bennett was so sure Oak Bay would conform with all the other ridings that joined his bandwagon in the run-off election that he assigned his personal friend and formally-appointed finance minister, Einar Gunderson, to unseating ex-reeve Gibbs.

Oak Bay threw Gunderson right back at Bennett and the premier was forced to open a "safe" Socred seat in a Victoria byelection later the same year in an effort to get his most important minister into the legislature.

However, even Socred Victoria hufflily refused to accept a man that had been given a bum's rush by its little neighbor and it slammed the door on Gunderson by electing a Liberal too.

●

The premier had to swallow a double humiliation and take over the finance portfolio himself while Gunderson departed centre stage for the shadows of the back room. Bennett determined to teach Oak Bay a lesson.

Evidence that the premier has always taken the affront personally can be seen to this day in the incredible ease with which Oak Bay's successive Liberal MLAs have been able to arouse tantrums just by smiling indulgently at their "constituent" across the floor.

Gibbs, the giant-killer, died just before the 1960 election. The Socreds craftily persuaded his successor as Oak Bay reeve, George Murdoch, to run for them. But a young lawyer, Alan Macfarlane, held on for the Liberals.

In 1963, the Socreds tried to beat Macfarlane with another bright young professional, Dr. Charles Ennals, but failed — and failed again in 1966. (Ennals this year is Socred candidate in Cowichan-Malahat.)

Last year, after Macfarlane resigned and was elevated to the bench, the Socreds tried to cover all bases by running Peter Pollen, a man with youth, tremendous business success, obvious sincerity, dedication and concern about social justice — and previous connections with both the riding's Conservative and Liberal parties.

But Oak Bay gave the seat to a Liberal again, Allan Cox, with a bigger majority than ever.

Now Bennett's condidate is an avowed and vocal critic of several policies central to Bennett's government. Dr. G. Scott Wallace, by running against Bennett, hopes (and Bennett hopes) to beat Cox.

Riding Covers More Than Oak Bay

Advance Polls Open Thursday

Advance polls for the Aug. 27 election will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 1 to 9 p.m.

Other locations are: Anglican Church Hall, 4th Street, Sidney, and Port Renfrew Community Hall.

Voters unable to attend an advance poll in their own constituency may use any other advance poll in British Columbia.

TOURIST CRUSH AT PEAK

Victoria's downtown hotels and motels were full this morning but motels outside the city had some vacancies.

"Tourist trade has reached its peak during the past seven days," said Kenneth King, a director of Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau. "But so far no tourist has been unable to get accommodation in a hotel or motel.

"That is, the bureau had not had to use the list of private homes it keeps for emergencies."

Mike Heppell, manager of the bureau, said many visitors call to say there is no accommodation downtown.

"But there are a fair number of vacancies outside the city limits," he said.

Some hoteliers say Victoria's tourist trade this month is up on August last year. Others consider it is about the same.

Arthur Mayse . . .

TODAY I'D LIKE TO PASS on a much too familiar tale of woe precisely as it was poured into my ear. It concerns a mother who has come up against the housing crisis as it affects those least able to cope with it.

But let her tell it:

"The house I've been renting for my three children and myself has been sold. I have to find a place for us before the end of the month, and I'm not getting anywhere.

"I've contacted all the real estate companies, watched the ads, and been in touch with the Low Income Rental office. But no luck.

★

"If you're separated or divorced, they don't like to accept you on those grounds.

"I've gone to the social worker who had my case when we were on welfare, but all she could do was send me back to Low Rental. They're sympathetic, but they don't get places for a person in my circumstances."

★

As I said, this is by no means a unique account. But to hear it told so, in a strained and anxious voice, is to realize yet again that we harbor an over-supply of citizens who don't know where their next roof is coming from.

To round out this account, the mother in question is going up for Canadian Manpower job training in September. She will receive $80 a week with which to keep herself and her family.

I'm not running a rental agency here—merely citing this one case in hopes that some reader can supply shingles. I have this mother's phone number, and will be glad to pass it on.

OAK BAY MARINA operator Bob Wright has made it plain that he will continue to rescue boatmen in trouble, but he harbors an understandable resentment against the agencies that apparently expect him to absorb the entire cost of such help in need.

Even if Wright succeeds in making his point with the federal transport department and the Air-Sea Rescue people, I hope the matter won't end there.

★

I have every respect for Air-Sea Rescue, and our Canadian Coast Guard as well. But in areas where pleasure and work craft swarm as thickly as they now do in our home waters, rescue facilities should be expanded.

I think the life-saving network should be beefed up with a Coast Guard longshore station, at least one powerful all-weather lifeboat, and a crew trained to work it in any weather.

Such a station should also have a helicopter on standby.

★

By all means, count on the civilian boatman for help in emergencies. He was responding gallantly and effectively to such calls long before either Coast Guard or Air-Sea Rescue were formed.

But it's high time he received professional year-round backing from a base closer to home than Vancouver. I think such a service here would much more than justify its cost.

IN OUR TOWN THERE IS a taxpayer who feels that Ottawa has done him wrong, and in consequence he is more than a little burned.

He is self-employed, which means that he's required to estimate his yearly income as best he can, and pay taxes on it by the quarter.

Last tax year, he found that he had not only under-guessed his income, but come to the April 30 tidying up with a tax debt to pay, plus interest on his owings.

This he was permitted to do on a month-by-month basis. Finally, to his pleasure, which he trusted the department of revenue would share, he turned in the last payment.

"The boys in the Victoria taxation office were nice about it," he reports. "In fact, it's a pleasure to do business with that staff, even when it costs you money. Then I got this letter from Ottawa."

The letter contained a bill for $200-plus. Across the bottom was typed the message that set him burning.

"You have failed to comply with your promise to pay your account promptly," it ran. "However, if you have already paid, return this account with details."

This he did. And such details!

Pixie Donna Helps B.C. Churn Water Into Gold

Gurr, Coughlan and Jacks All Have Four Swim Wins

HALIFAX (CP)—British Columbia's water waifs, led by 14-year-old pixie Donna Gurr, are churning the water into gold in Canada Games swimming compeittion and wondering what all the fuss is about.

"Like the Games are a big deal and all that and it's a thrill to win, but personally the Canadian nationals are the big thrill," said Miss Gurr of Richmond, B.C., remarkably subdued after collecting her fourth gold medal Tuesday.

Two other swimmers, Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., and Ron Jacks of Vancouver, also have four gold medals each after three days of competition.

B.C. swimmers took five of eight golds Tuesday. Competition ends in both swimming and diving today with four events, the 100-metre butterfly, the 200-metre breaststroke, the 400-metre freestyle relay and 10-metre platform diving.

The medal winners, many of whom came directly from the national finals last week in Montreal, admit they have difficulty reaching peak performances.

Times have been slow, except for the mark set Sunday night by Jeanne Warren of Vancouver, who broke her own Canadin native record in the 400-metre individual medley.

"I found more pressure at the Games than I expected," 16-year-old Miss Warren said Tuesday night after winning the women's 200-metre butterfly, her second of the Games.

"Most of us thought we would be able to take it easy, but it hasn't worked out that way. Maybe that's because we were tired."

Late-Arriving Hutton Wins Three

Miss Coughlan won two golds Tuesday, in the women's 100-metre freestyle and as a member of the Ontario team that took the women's 400-metre medley relay.

Her other golds came Sunday in the 200-metre freestyle and Monday in the 400-metre freestyle.

After piling up three golds in the first two days of competition, Miss Gurr took her fourth Tuesday with an easy win in the 200-metre individual medley. Her other golds came in the 200-metre backstroke, the 100-metre backstroke, and as a member of B.C.'s winning 800-metre freestyle relay team.

Jacks also won two golds Tuesday, in the 200-metre butterfly and as a member of the victorious B.C. team in the men's 400-metre medley relay. His other golds were in the 400-metre freestyle and as a member of B.C.'s 800-metre freestyle relay team which swept to victory Monday night.

Veteran Ralph Hutton of Campbell River, already has three gold medals, two coming Tuesday night when he anchored two winning B.C. relay teams. He was a late-comer to the Games, arriving Monday night to help his team win the men's 800-metre freestyle relay.

Hutton, who was in Kentucky competing in the U.S. nationals, was anchor on the 400-metre medley relay.

George Smith of Edmonton, Bill Kennedy of London, Ont., and Bill Mahony of New Westminister, B.C., have two golds.

Smith got his in the men's 200-metre individual medley Tuesday, and the 400-metre individual medley Sunday.

Mahony's second gold came Tuesday as a member of the B.C. team that captured the men's 400-metre medley relay. His other came in the men's 100-metre backstroke Monday.

Squalls Hit Sailors As Ontario Bowlers Sweep Their Contests

HALIFAX (CP)—Canada Games sailors, knocked out of action Tuesday by squall winds that hit 35 knots, had their boats repaired and ready for today's final race.

The swimmers—dominated by the young British Columbia squad—and the Ontario lawn bowlers highlighted Tuesday's action at the eight-day Games which end Sunday.

Victory in the lawn-bowling doubles gave Ontario a clean sweep of the sport—their second such triumph. Earlier, Ontario oarsmen won all five rowing events on Lake Banook.

Five of the eight swimming gold medals went to B.C. competitors.

The only swimmer to seriously challenge B.C. domination is Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., who has four gold medals so far—a feat matched by Donna Gurr of Richmond, B.C., and Ron Jacks of Vancouver.

LED WITH 15 GOLDS

Ontario continued to lead all provinces and two territories on the basis of gold medals with 15.

B.C., after its powerful showing in the pool Tuesday, was one behind in the gold column. B.C. had 16 silver medals and nine third-place bronze to three silvers and seven bronze for Ontario.

The only other province to win a gold medal during the first three days was Alberta, which had five.

But there's another system of calculating excellence at the Games—a province-by-province aggregate scoreboard which awards a maximum of 12 points to each province for its showing in an entire sport.

Ontario dominated rowing and lawn bowling—the only two sports completed after Tuesday night—and topped the points standing with 24, two ahead of B.C.

Manitoba and Nova Scotia followed with 18.

MEET IN FINAL

Many team sports moved toward a cleanup Tuesday night. Alberta and Ontario won their divisions in women's softball for the right to meet in the final for gold and silver medals with Manitoba and B.C. going for the bronze.

Ontario and Nova Scotia were leading their divisions in baseball.

Soccer, played in four sections, had an undefeated team in each section—Nova Scotia, B.C., Ontario and Newfoundland—and the schedule called for Nova Scotia to play B.C with Ontario going against Canada's easternmost province.

Field hockey was down to the semi-finals and Nova Scotia was to play New Brunswick with Ontario against B.C. Winners meet for the gold and silver.

A story should have some excuse to be written, I once read somewhere. And the surest way to get someone to read it is to talk about women.

So, today, I think I have the excuse, I know I have the girl, and I think you'll agree, I do have a story..

A no-nonsense story.

The excuse is understandable — it is about sport. The girl is the pixie of the piece, a four-time gold medallist in sport, and the story should be construed solely as a lesson in courage and self-determination — the true hallmark of a champion.

Certainly it is not intended to be maudlin.

And furthermore, all you young whippersnappers listening in should take note: This is about our generation, not yours.

It has its beginning in 1953.

That was the year in which what was tantamount to a polio outbreak hit the city. Several persons were affected, some fatally and some of the more fortunate far more seriously than others.

Her name is Gwen John. She is 43, and lives at 1579 Hawthorn with her husband, Ken, and their two children, Susan, 21, and a son, Cliff, 18. And she puts herself in the category of the favored ones with the simple declaration:

"I consider myself fortunate to be able to enjoy life and to do the things I can."

Gwen last night left for Hamilton, Ont., along with another illustrious athlete from the city, Lorna Vinden. While there they will compete in the Canadian Paraplegic Games.

Gwen will engage in her particular specialty, swimming, and in that capacity will be defending four gold medals she won last year.

"Lorna takes part in almost everything," Gwen explained, "and wins a lot of the events, too. I just stick to swimming." Mrs. Vinden represented the city at the last World Paraplegic Games and won several honors. Both are hoping to represent Canada at the World Games in South America this December.

What happens when polio strikes you down? I was intrigued.

Then she continued:

"I really didn't know at first that I wouldn't walk again," she said, "and when I first heard it, I still didn't really believe it.

"Then there was nothing to do but accept it, take the rehabilitation treatment, and hope for the best. And here I am," she replied with an engaging smile.

But all those years in between? I had to ask it.

"You promised," she replied, then admitted: "You realy want to know what bugged me the most, at first?

"It was when people came to house all dressed up. It made me feel badly — that I couldn't do it."

"But not any more. I soon got over it. And hey, you should see my new racing bathing suit! It's really sumpin'."

"But there must be something you'd like to do?

"Sure, I'd like to water ski, and walk in the woods, but I can't, so what? I drive a car and work part time as a telephone operator, do the housework, read, sew, make supper, and can do almost everything a normal person can do—except walk."

●

The family — how do they react?

"Are you kiddin'?" she quipped. "But I do sleep in and they make their own breakfast."

"Yeah, and give orders," interjected son Cliff, who was trying, without immediate success, to arrange for a car for the night.

About your swimming?

"Well, I used to swim a lot, and we had a place at Shawnigan, so it came rather easy," she explained.

"Basketball? No, I don't play it, or any of the other wheelchair sports. They're far too rough. Have you ever seen it? We do have some wild ones, you know. They tip your chair (she demonstrated) and you may end up with a broken leg. It has happened, you know."

The training?

"About thre times a week, an hour at a time, with coach Al Aylward at Centennal Pool. He helps me a lot. And I can get in and out of the pool myself, so there's no problem."

The competitive bit?

"I really wasn't trying to prove anything.

"I thought it might be fun, so I entered the B.C. meet and when I won, I thought, why not the Canadians? and I won that," Gwen said. "Then, I guess I was hooked," she added.

The events?

"Freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke and medley," was the surprising reply. "But the big surprise was yet to come:

"And all in one day."

How do you expect to do?

"I hope to win, naturally, but I have to watch all those young ones that are coming up," she cautioned.

"And maybe I'll have a little fun when I'm down there, too, if they don't take away my wheels."

Adanacs Keep Rocks Alive

Victoria continued to receive aid from rivals in the Western Lacrosse Association Tuesday night, but must help themselves tonight at Memorial Arena in order to keep faint playoff hopes burning.

New Westminster Salmonbellies lent a hand Tuesday by downing Carlings in Vancouver, 18-4.

The Irish face league-leading Coquitlam Adanacs tonight at 8:30.

RE-ELECTED Pacific Northwest regional director of Babe Ruth Baseball League during recent regional championships in Casper, Wyoming, is Wilf Sadler of Victoria. Sadler is currently in Mattoon, Ill., for the Babe Ruth world series.

To make the task tonight even more fearful, the Irish will be without the services of Bill Spotswood and Mike Beaulac. Spotswood is on his honeymoon and Beaulac has probably been sidelined for the balance of the season with a knee injury.

DOUBTFUL STARTER

Coach Tom Bruce plans to dress Nanaimo juniors Don Nicholson, Gordie Blackburn and Grant Skipper tonight, with the hope that their youthful speed will help upset the Adanacs' tactics.

Mounties Fall Back; Play Here Saturday

Vancouver Mounties may still be alive in their quest for a Coast League playoff berth when they meet Portland Beavers here on Saturday.

However, their hopes grew slimmer Tuesday night when they bowed to Spokane, 6-5, while league-leading Tacoma edged Phoenix, 2-1. Any combination of Tacoma victories and Mountie losses totalling five will give the northern division title to Tacoma.

Mounties had a five-run lead, but Spokane scored three in the sixth, one in the eighth and two in the ninth to eke out the victory.

In other games Eugene, Southern Division leader, defeated Tucson, 8-3, and Hawaii defeated Portland 9-3.

Saturday's game, a regular league contest, will be played at Athletic Park at 1:30 and will be part of a doubleheader, the second game to be played at Vancouver at night.

OAKLAND ORGAN MUSIC . . . . . DISTRACTED TIGER ACE

Charley O Hears No From Joe

BOSTON (AP) — American League President Joe Cronin says he has ordered owner Charles O. Finley of Oakland Athletics to stop the practice of distracting opposing players by having his organist strike up the music while play is in progress.

Cronin said he issued the "no music" order after receiving a report from the umpires who handled Sunday's controversial game in which Detroit Tigers pitcher Denny McLain was distracted by organ music.

"I told him I don't condone such action," Cronin said. "We don't mind organ playing when there's a break in the action but not when the pitcher is getting ready to throw."

The Sunday incident was the second at Oakland involving McLain, himself an accomplished organist.

The first time on May 29 when Oakland Coliseum organist Lloyd Fox struck a loud chord as McLain went into his stretch and the pitcher hesitated and was charged with a balk.

Last Sunday, with McLain again pitching in Oakland, the organist struck up loud chords as the Athletics started a rally. McLain protested to plate umpire Bill Stewart, who told Oakland Manager Hank Bauer to have the music stopped but to no avail.

The music apparently didn't reduce the Tiger ace's effectiveness, however, as he recorded his 19th victory with a 9-4 decision.

Billy's Spectacular Catch Preserved Ken's No-Hitter

By The Associated Press

Two spectacular catches high-lighted National League activity Tuesday—one by Chicago Cubs' Billy Williams and the other by Cleon Jones, of New York Mets.

Williams backed against the left field fence in Chicago's Wrigley Field and leaped as a 16-mile an hour wind wafted Hank Aaron's home run bid into his hands. The catch preserved Ken Holtzman's masterpiece as Chicago Cubs' left-hander pitched a no-hitter against Atlanta Braves for a 3-0 shutout.

Jones, playing left centre field in a four-man outfield shift by the Mets against San Francisco's Willie McCovey, raced to the wall, leaped high with his glove outstretched and pulled down the bid for a homer in the 13th inning. Tommie Agee's homer an inning later gave the Mets their 1-0 victory over the Giants.

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, San Diego Padres edged Montreal Expos 5-4, Los Angeles Dodgers shut out Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, Pittsburgh Pirates dropped Houston Astros 5-1 and Cincinnati Reds whipped St. Louis Cardinals 8-4.

Holtzman, who pitched the fifth no-hitter of the major league season, received spectacular fielding support from the Cubs. But Williams' catch of Aaron's drive was the key.

Juan Marichal, who struck out 13 and retired 17 straight batters over one stretch, lost for the third time in 24 lifetime decisions against the Mets.

TOUGH ACT TO FOLLOW

"I don't know exactly what a great game would be, but I haven't done it yet," said the Cleveland Indians left-hander after throwing a one-hitter—an infield single by Bert Campaneris leading off the fourth inning—at the Oakland Athletics.

Odom, Oakland's star right-hander who has been feuding with McDowell all season, pitches tonight in the 1969 finale between the two clubs—and Odom has boasted that he "can shut out the Indians anytime I want."

Tuesday night's defeat was the seventh in the last 10 games for the Athletics and dropped them 2½ games behind Minnesota Twins in the American League West. The Twins beat Boston Red Sox 8-6 on Harmon Killebrew's two-run homer in the ninth inning.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles blasted California Angels 10-0, Detroit Tigers turned back Seattle Pilots 5-3, New York Yankees whipped Kansas City Royals 5-1 and Washington Senators downed Chicago White Sox 3-1.

JAKE VETOES LION PROTEST

TORONTO (CP) — Commissioner Jake Gaudaur has announced he is disallowing a formal protest by British Columbia Lions of a Canadian Football League game against Saskatchewan Roughriders Aug. 3.

The time clock in Taylor Field, Regina, failed in the waning minutes of the game and the Lions protested on the grounds that officials had not taken steps to compensate.

Leroy Keyes, top-ranked United States college football player and number one draft choice of the Philadelphia Eagles, may be negotiating with British Columbia's winless Lions.

A report in the Regina Leader-Post here that Keyes was talking money with the Lions Tuesday has touched off a flurry of controversy and confusion in the Canadian Football League.

In Philadelphia they don't care, in Toronto they're incredulous, in Regina they're worried, and in Vancouver they're denying everything.

Only man who appears to know where Keyes really is, is Arthur Morse, the footballer's business agent — and he's not talking.

Morse has said Keyes flew to Canada, he would not say where to negotiate with a pro team after he and Philadelphia remained poles apart in contract negotiations.

The Eagles are reported to be offering a $170,000 package deal and Keyes wants $225,000.

Lions president Allan McEachern denied the Leader-Post speculation, and B.C. coach Jim Champion said only that if Keyes was in Vancouver "I didn't see him."

General manager Denny Veitch could not be reached for comment.

ON NEGOTIATION LIST

Meanwhile in Toronto, a source close to the CFL said Keyes is on the negotiation list of a Canadian club, but commissioner Jack Gaudaur refused to reveal which one.

The source said it is "impossible to imagine any Canadian club outbidding the Eagles $170,000 offer."

Believed to be the highest CLF contract was a three-year $100,000 package paid by Montreal Alouettes for quarterback Sandy Stephens in the 1960s.

In Philadelphia, Eagles general manager Pete Retzlaff admitted, in effect, breaking off negotiations with Keyes.

"I won't call them unless they indicate a willingness to negotiate on a common-sense level," he said.

Brothers Bounce Game Into Draw

Collisions between brothers usually occur away from public view, but there was one for all to see at Royal Athletic Park Tuesday night and it may have been a costly crash for Independents.

It might have robbed Independents of a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff final with Gorge Hotel.

Independents started to move in the bottom of the seventh inning with Ken Hawkins on base, Barry Cosier on first and the score tied 3-3 with only one out.

Craig Lawrence hit a grounder to shortstop Tony Cosier, who got the second out by stepping on second base. While attempting to fire the ball to first for the third out, he was hit hard by his older brother, the ball bounced loose and Ken Hawkins raced home for what at first appeared to be the tie-breaking run.

INTERFERENCE CALLED

However, interference was called on the older brother, Lawrence was declared out and the game called because of darkness.

Third game of the series is scheduled for Thursday at 6:30 p.m. and the fourth game on Sunday at 2 p.m. If Gorge wins both of these games, resumption of the Tuesday game will follow immediately.

Pitch Breaks Coach's Jaw

HALIFAX (CP) — John Trevor Haar of Vancouver, playing coach of the British Columbia team in Canada Games baseball competition, suffered a broken jaw Tuesday when hit by a pitch while batting in a game against Ontario.

Bates Blank Luckies To Grab Playoff Lead

Brian Pearce turned in excellent job of pitching Tuesday and powered Bate Construction to a 3-0 shutout over Luckies in the opening game of their best-of-three semi-final series at Central Park.

After a first-inning crush when Larry Montgomery singled and brought Roy St. Dennis as far as third base. Pearce retired the next three batters without letting the ball out of the infield and allowed only three hits the rest of the way.

Don Lancaster doubled in Doug Gregory, who had singled, for another run in the second inning and Don Stevenson's double and Ken Bate's single provided the final run in the seventh inning.

Molsons, leading the semi-against Langford Drywall 1-0, can move into the final with a win Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in Central.

Karate Students Idled As Billing Miffs Tutor

Tournament director Emil Repack of Pentieton, billed as head referee, said Dr. Olaf E. Simon, a 10th degree black belt karate master from Calgary, left when he learned he was to be chief judge, considered a lower position.

Simon, considered among the top 20 karate experts in the world, then pulled out 40 participants and their instructors, who are under contract to him, using his methods and name in karate schools, and prevented them from competing.

Most of the 40 were from Regina. Repack said some of the instructors involved told him they will seek legal advice, possibly in view of challenging Simon's action. Nature of the contracts between Simon and his instructors is not known.

Repack emerged as tournament champion from the 65 British Columbia, Montana and Prairie participants remaining. He was declared winner when Dwight Scheer of Saskatoon accidentally hit him in the mouth, breaking Repack's dentures in four places.

JOCKETTE WINS THREE

MONTREAL (CP) — Mary Bacon, 19, of Oklahoma stunned fans at Blue Bonnets Raceway for the second time in less than a week Tuesday when she won three races on the same card and finished in the money in all five races she entered.

It was the first time a woman jockey in North America won that many races on the same card. Last Saturday, she became the first woman jockey ever to win a thoroughbred race in Eastern Canada, also at Blue Bonnets.

The pretty, Chicago-born jockey rode Royal Sucree to a win in the third race, Banquet Hall in the sixth and Fleet Arab in the eighth.

Oak Bay Election Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

That local beaches should be polluted with human faeces in an era when technology can place men on the moon is hard to believe. This pollution results from sewage being discharged through outfalls so short, that at low tide, the sewage is discharged on to the beach. Action to clean up this health hazard must be given top priority. The Greater Victoria Sewerage Study carried out by engineers in 1966 recommended that construction of extended outfalls to stated distances and at stated depths, without primary treatment, would correct the situation. Confusion exists in the minds of the public since the validity of the study has been questioned by various professionals, such as biologists, oceanographers and doctors on the basis that insufficient study has been done on the nature of the currents, tides, etc., in the receiving waters. The Pollution Committee of the Victoria Medical Society and the Environmental Health Committee of th B.C. Medical Association have expressed concern over the proposed sewage disposal into our coastal waters until the necessary detailed ocean studies have been performed and evaluated. It would indeed be folly to proceed with the proposed installation of outfalls and possibly also primary treatment plants, at very considerable expense, only to find that we had created one large cesspool off shore, due to lack of adequate ocean current. If elected, I would strongly advocate the immediate creation of a study group, composed of hydrographic and oceanographic experts, biologists and engineers, to begin the immediate search for the ocean data now unknown. As the situation stands today, this is the only sensible step to take, for the Sewage Report itself includes the statement, "much more extensive oceanographic data must be obtained."

All-Day Seeding Of Debbie Continues

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Another all-day seeding of Hurricane Debbie was launched from Puerto Rico today as the growing storm moved west-northwest in the direction of the U.S. mainland.

Winds reached 125 miles an hour, stronger than when the storm was first hit Monday with massive barrages of silver iodide crystals.

Seeding aircraft made the first of four saturations of the eye of the hurricane at 8 a.m. EDT. Other attacks would be made at two-hour intervals in a repeat of the Monday operation.

Scientists hoped that the most extensive seeding of a tropical storm ever attempted would sap some of its strength by releasing heat as water in the hurricane formed around the crystals and turned to ice. Heat drawn from warm, moist tropic waters is the fuel of the hurricane.

Located 500 miles south of Bermuda, Debbie was moving at 15 miles an hour, hurling high winds out over a 300-mile-wide area of Atlantic.

Red Troops Launch Pre-Dawn Attacks

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops made more attacks on U.S. troops south of Da Nang today and battled American infantrymen trying to reach the wreckage of a helicopter downed with eight Americans board.

Military spokesmen said 198 North Vietnamese had been killed in four days of fighting near Hiep Duc, a district capital 30 miles south of Da Nang. Sixteen American soldiers were known dead.

Later today, another sharp fight broke out about seven miles away. The action was continuing.

Another seven U.S. soldiers and Associated Press photographer Oliver Noonan, 29, of Norwell, Mass., were reported missing after their helicopter crashed in the area Tuesday.

It was one of three helicopters shot down Tuesday and today. One chopper crashed into a U.S. patrol of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division in the central highlands, killing three infantrymen and injuring six others.

REPORT 28 ATTACKS

The U.S. command reported 28 enemy rocket and mortar attacks on allied bases and towns during the night, with four Americans killed and 21 wounded.

Fighting also broke out anew south of the centre portion of the demilitarized zone northwest of the U.S. marine outpost called the Rockpile. Two marines were killed.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 29 civilians wounded when two buses ran over land mines in the Mekong Delta south of Saigon.

U.S. headquarters also said nine Americans were killed and five wounded when an American tank fired on U.S. troops during a North Vietnamese attack on a base camp 60 miles north of Saigon Tuesday.

Indian Dialect Course Added To Night School

Saanich school board adult evening classes this fall will include a course on the Tsartlip Indian dialect of the Salish language.

Other courses organized by the board in co-operation with the department of Indian affairs include budget cooking, sewing and guitar lessons.

Frank Baxter, director of adult education, announced the evening classes today. Many will begin in Peninsula schools Sept. 16.

New courses in the program include office procedures and machines, effective English, efficient reading, batik, block printing, life drawing and composition, interior design, resin craft, woodcarving, tractor care, band, guitar, folk dancing, chess, hunter safety, English riding, driver training, stocks and bonds, and wills and estates.

Courses to be repeated from last year are upholstery, camper construction, sailing, conversational French, bridge, ceramics, dressmaking, painting, gardening and defensive driving.

A brochure on all the courses will be mailed to Peninsula residents next week.

U.S. Must Take 'Sensible Risk'

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today that in deciding on the timing of further withdrawal of troops from Vietnam the United States is "prepared to take sensible risks for peace."

Rogers told a news conference that while the lull in the war in Vietnam had been broken by a surge on Viet Cong-North Vietnamese activity on Aug. 11 and 12, "on the whole enemy activity over the last two months has been somewhat less than previously."

Rogers said that the United States had responded to the lull—initiated by the Communists in June—in an effort to lower the level of combat but he refused to say precisely what battle orders were given.

He also said that the United States is prepared to respond further to Communist cuts in activity.

The emphasis of Rogers' comment on the lull and on "sensible risks for peace" appeared to support the expectation that President Nixon will announce new troop reductions toward the end of the month, although the final decision is yet to be made.

On other issues, Rogers said:

—The current anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia a year ago "serves as a grim reminder with ominous overtones of the difficulty we have" in trying to negotiate and resolve differences with the Soviet Union.

—The NATO allies are closely watching the heavily-expanded Soviet naval force in the Mediterranean and NATO "is going to take any necessary action to be sure the security of the area is not impaired."

Rogers did not explain what he meant by action but presumably it referred to possible redeployment of allied forces to offset Soviet deployment.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

The B.C. Teacher's Federation, in giving widespread publicity to its concern and aims during this election, has emphasized two specific points. One, that there are inequities created by the present formula for financing; and two, that the referendum principle is undemocratic in that 40% of the ratepayers can prevent any School Board from spending more than 110% of the basic education programme approved by the Minister of Education. Electors should understand very clearly where I stand on these issues. Since I am not adequately informed as to the various details of the formula and since I recognize the sincere desire of the teachers to have it amended, I would agree to a re-examination of the formula. Regarding the referendum principle, I do not agree that a local School Board should be given complete fiscal authority, this is complete authority to spend as much money as it deems necessary for its educational programme, without reference to the ratepayer. The ratepayers may well have a different sense of priorities from the School Board as to the spending of their tax dollar, and in my view it is their democratic right to be allowed to express their opinions by referendum. There may be room for further consideration as to whether a 60% majority should be required; perhaps 51% majority should suffice, but I am strongly opposed to the concept that a School Board should be given any carte blanche regarding operating expenses, without ratepayers' approval.

Ed cation is missing something

Education isn't just the three R's... It's the development of a child to his or her full potential. For this to happen the mind must be challenged, expanded, exercised... and the body encouraged to grow healthily, to acquire the recreational skills needed for a lifetime of leisure. Does your school have a gymnasium? playing field? music and art facilities? Is it a model for the good life? The present Finance Formula makes it impossible for every School Board to provide these facilities! It must be changed. Education's fourth "R" is missing... in the election support the candidate who supports Better Education in B.C.

Educatiiion

is overcrowded Children need to be treated as individuals in a learning experience that grows more complex, more concentrated, every day. How large are the classes in your schools? Experts say that in the important elementary years particularly, the pupil/teacher ratio must not exceed 25:1. Does your area measure up to this? Or is your child being short-changed like thousands of others in B.C. In the election... support the candidate who supports Better Education in B.C.

Education is taking off but not in British Columbia Our children are grounded by a short-sighted education policy that inhibits the use of new methods, new equipment, new approaches to the learning process... while society as a whole is experiencing sweeping changes, our teachers and pupils are tied to the old ways by a Pennies Formula that provides very little for research and experimentation. Do the schools in your area have simple inexpensive Teacher Aides? Computer-assisted instruction and administration? Closed-circuit television? Is your tax dollar being invested productively? 'Hundreds of Thousands' Of Dropouts Sent Farming

By PIERRE COMPARET

PEKING (AFP) — Young Chinese by hundreds of thousands now are migrating from the big cities to outlying farm districts and distant border areas.

The mass departures coincide with the third anniversary of the mammoth march of Red Guards which signalled their entrance on China's political stage.

They also illustrate one of the most astonishing aspects of China's educational and youth policies: what to do with the hundreds of thousands of dropouts created by the Cultural Revolution.

Tuesday a few detachments of Red Guards marked the occasion of the Red Guards' emergence with a march in the streets of Peking, and The People's Daily, the Communist party paper, extolled the role they have played "in response to Chairman Mao's call," and urged them to concern themselves with the affairs of the state and "carry out the Great Cultural Revolution to the finish."

On June 13, 1966, all students and school children were sent home on "unlimited holiday" to take an active part in the purge of the state and party managing staffs.

UNIVERSITIES CLOSED

All universities have remained closed to this date, but lessons resumed in secondary schools Aug. 15 this year.

What was to be done with young people who had reached the end of the secondary school cycle and should normally have entered universities?

Most of them are leaving for the country these days. There is no indication as to the length of these young migrants' exiles. Are they being sent away for "re-education" in the midst of peasant folk, or are they being systematically uprooted to populate the vast provinces in the far west and northeast? Observers wondered.

Those departing from Shanghai—some 400,000—have been shipped to Krin province in the north, Yunnan Kweichow in the extreme south, and also to the border of Outer Mongolia and to trouble-torn Heilungkian along the northeast frontier with Russia.

U.S. 'Is Not Looking' For Wheat Price War

TOKYO (Reuters) — The U.S. agriculture department export marketing sales manager, Clifford G. Pulvermacher, said today the United States is not seeking a price war between world wheat-exporting nations.

Pulvermacher is in Tokyo to discuss the effects of a new wheat-import-bidding policy introduced by Japan last week. The new policy opens Japan's weekly wheat bids to all comers instead of limiting them to traditional suppliers, such as the U.S., Canada and Australia.

Pulvermacher said in an interview today: "In the main we are going to have to maintain competitive prices.

"But this does not mean that if Canada or Australia come down five or six cents that we are going to react immediately."

He added: "We are going to try to act responsibly .... we are not seeking a price war."

RESUMED PURCHASES

Japan last week resumed wheat import purchases—suspended since mid-July—after the U.S., Canada and Australia had reduced their prices, yielding to strong Japanese pressure. At the same time, it introduced its new "global" wheat policy opening tenders to all comers.

The Japanese food agency said Tuesday that Pulvermacher had indicated the U.S. would be ready to adjust its wheat prices further in order to keep them competitive if other wheat exporting nations should cut their prices.

Pulvermacher said today this is not the case. He said that in his talks with the agency he had said that while the U.S. would be generally competitive, it would not be on a day-by-day policy.

He explained that Canada had dropped its prices during the last week for certain types of wheat and the U.S. had not responded with similar cuts.

He added, however, if the prices of wheat from other nations dropped below certain levels then the U.S. would have to consider action to remain competitive.

Logger Jailed

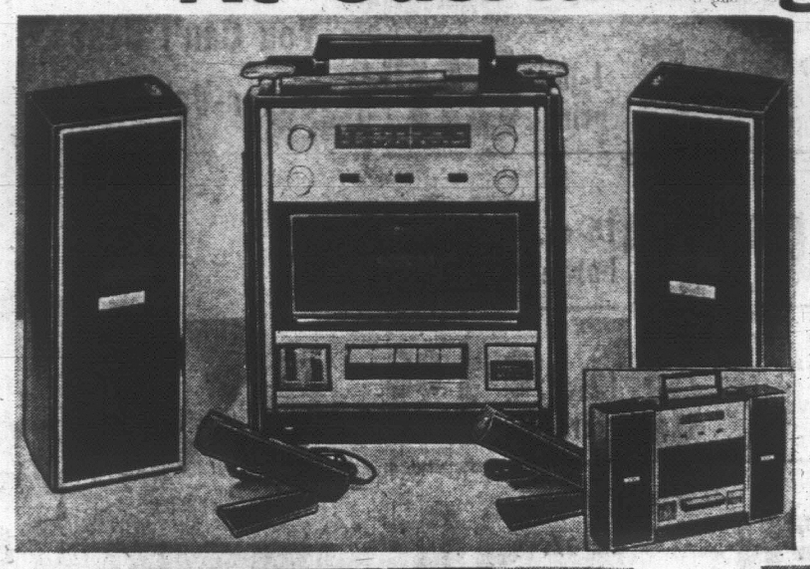

VANCOUVER (CP)—Thomas Ignace, 30, a logger with a prison record dating back to 1957, was sentenced to three years Tuesday after pleading guilty to breaking and entering five Vancouver offices in June.

Recipe of the Week

From Bea Wright's Kitchen
Cooking a Shellbone Roast

Place roast on rack in shallow roasting pan, cover top of a lean roast with pieces of fat or dripping. Season half way through cooking and add vegetables during roasting if desired, but do not cover with a lid. Roast at 325° F. allowing approx. 20 to 40 minutes per lb. depending on whether it is to be rare or well done. Allow the longer time per lb. for roasts 3 to 6 lbs. and the shorter for larger roasts. A meat thermometer will be more accurate for judging the doneness of the meat.

Making Gravy: For each cup of gravy, pour off fat, leaving 2 tbsp. in pan. Add 1½-2 tbsp. flour and stir until well browned. Remove from heat, stir in a little cold water to make a smooth paste and gradually add 1 cup hot liquid water, meat stock or vegetable liquid to flour fat mixure. Continue stirring over low heat until smooth and thick. Allow approx. 3 to 4 tbsp. gravy per servings.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR ACTOR

LOS ANGELES (AP) —A bench warrant has been issued for actor Broderick Crawford on a claim he failed to pay a $4,588 grocery bill.

The plaintiff, Bishops Fine Foods, claims Broderick owes for goods bought through July 29, 1965.

Clerks Get Raise

WINNIPEG (CP)—About 2,000 employees of Winnipeg supermarkets Tuesday agreed to a new contract giving them wage increases of between 50 and 70 cents an hour. Wages before the increases ranged between $1.55 and $2.88 an hour.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Two predominantly Negro areas of this city were under an around-the-clock state of emergency today as police sought to prevent a fourth straight night of violence.

Fire bombs damaged a community centre and the administration building of a public housing project Tuesday night.

Two policemen were burned slightly when a fire bomb was dropped at their feet from a building.

TAKES TOUGHER STAND

One of those arrested was a white man who police said carried a shotgun and 45 shells in his car. He was charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

City Manager Donald J. O'Hara, who had declared states of emergency Sunday and Monday nights and rescinded them at 5:30 a.m. the following mornings, said the emergency declared Tuesday night would remain in effect indefinitely.

Curfews would go into effect automatically each night at 9 p.m. and be lifted at 5:30 a.m. as long as the emergency lasts, he said.

During the curfew, Deputy Police Chief James Gorman said, all businesses would be closed and persons found on the streets would be subject to arrest.

The affected areas are a 14-block tract along East Falls Street, near the downtown sections, and a 40-block triangular section on the North Side about 1½ miles away.

Tuesday night's violence lasted less than two hours.

In three nights of violence about 40 persons have been arrested and 14 injured including four Canadian visitors.

No estimates of the damage were available.

Fire Closes Play

LONDON (AP) — An electric failure due to fire in a neighborhood power station Tuesday night closed The Mousetrap, London's longest-running hit play. The Agatha Christie thriller had run 16 years and nine months without missing a performance.

Doctors Object To Midwives

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Federal Health Minister John Munro says nurses should be trained as midwives to cut expenses for patients and save obstetricians' time for problem births.

Mr. Munro made the suggestion at the International Council of Nurses in Montreal in June.

"It is said that the North American obstetrician is the most expensive midwife on earth. Why not cut his expensive caseload by instructing nursing students in such fields? That way the obstetrician could use his or her talents to their full potential."

In the United Kingdom, nurses may become midwives by taking a year's training in addition to their nursing training.

A sampling of opinion among doctors, nurses and public in this Ontario city indicates the idea might not be universally accepted in Canada.

Two obstetricians with opposing opinions about training nurses have twin objections to being called the world's most expensive midwives.

Dr. John A. Belton says: "John Munro shouldn't make slick statements like that. It's simply erroneous."

He agreed, though, that he does spend time on cases that could and perhaps should be handled by a specialist nurse.

Fees Are Reasonable

"I deliver lots of people now I'm sure can be just as well handled by nurses here. ... Doctors by and large won't be able to carry the load the public expects of them. There is an increasing need for the obstetricial nurse, and I'm all for it."

Dr. James J. A. Fraser says: "I consider $165 to $175 for medical care during pregnancy a very small amount."

He says he charges $40 more than a general practitioner, and says there is no need for an obstetrician in up to 80 per cent of the cases he looks after.

He suggests that instead of training midwives, the government establish a policy of producing more doctors and requiring them to put in two or three years of general practice before specializing.

"I honestly don't think there is any need to have midwives delivering where there are enough doctors."

"Nurses can be trained, yes, but I don't think in this district it's particularly necessary.

"I wonder if we have enough nurses in Canada to fill the need we have at present. When we have enough nurses it will be time to look at it (midwife training)."

Sister Audrey Mantle, administrator at Hotel Dieu Hospital, says she feels it would be a step backward. It might mean more babies delivered at home, as many are in the U.K.

Hospital Care Better

"It's taken two generations to stop having babies at home. Maybe we don't want to think this way. We feel hospital care is superior."

Mary Kelleher is a midwife from Ireland who says she feels Canadian nurses would accept the system.

"It's a bit of a drawback to have to wait for a doctor. The system in the U.K. gives you more responsibility and confidence."

Opinion among members of the general public seems to favor the doctor over the midwife, but there are exceptions.

A woman with five sons said one was delivered by a nurse, and she would have no objection to a midwife for a normal birth.

Another said: "It's not a bad idea (midwife training). I have a daughter who's a nurse, and she's quite capable of delivering a baby."

One father objected to the idea. "Here you can rush to a hospital, call a doctor, and know what you are paying for."

Another disagreed. "I'm for anyone that's fully trained."

The general consensus was summed up by a woman who said: "I'd rather have a doctor. Having midwives deliver babies . . . seems like a step backwards."

HERE FROM HALIFAX FOR A DAY

A one-day visit to Victoria was made by Cmdr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell, who flew from Halifax for a family dinner to celebrate the 50th wedding anniversary of Commander Campbell's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Campbell. Dr. Campbell, left, is a former deputy minister of education for British Columbia. His son and daughter-in-law (the former Elizabeth Foote) left today to return to Halifax, where Commander Campbell is executive officer in HMCS Protecteur. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Veterans Bring Widow to Canada For Pension

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wearing her husband's medals, a South African woman arrived in Winnipeg this week to claim a war widow's pension which her own country had denied her.

Sixty-year-old Mrs. Richard Atkins of Cape Town plans to spend a year in Canada, a residence requirement which then will permit the $145-a-month Canadian allowance to be sent to her in her native land.

Her application for a South African pension was turned down because the First World War service of Richard Atkins, a native of Cape Town who died three years ago at the age of 79, was with the Canadian army.

At the outbreak of the war, he sailed to Halifax and enlisted. His honors included the military medal, won in Flanders. After his discharge with the rank of sergeant, he returned to South Africa.

Mrs. Atkins was his third wife.

A Canadian solution to Mrs. Atkins' financial problems was tackled by Lenard Green, a Winnipeg high school teacher and a friend of her late husband's.

He believed an injustice had been done, Mr. Green said.

"It's a story of tragedy . . . a human being is being made the victim of a government's incapacity to honor its obligations."

Mr. Green said that since it became a republic, South Africa has ignored a pre-1914 agreement for the care of imperial veterans' widows.

He brought Mrs. Atkins' plight to the attention of Canadian government officials and Canadian veterans' organizations.

Winnipeg branches of the Royal Canadian Legion, the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans, the War Amputations of Canada and the Imperial Veterans in Canada all shared the expense of flying Mrs. Atkins to Canada.

About two dozen members of these organizations were on hand to greet Mrs. Atkins.

Fur Flies as Crowd Fights

By KAYE ROWE

ROME (CP) — The fur flew, women fainted and strong men used rugby tactics when seven leading high-fashion furriers made their presentations under the auspices of the National Bureau of Italian Fashion.

On a summer day of sizzling temperatures, fur in massed opulence proved magnetic for 600 people who tried to fight their way past the barrier guards at the Grand Hotel. The ballroom holds a scant 400, with golden chairs for less than the total number of listed fashion press and official buyers in attendance but with standing room for the most popular showings.

Countess Consuelo Crispi suffered only minor roughing, standing among the first in line and having a broad-shouldered escort to run interference for her.

The American girl enjoyed the advantage of her height—five feet, 10 inches—and sturdy resistance to the crowd pressing from the back. She wore her fighting ensemble: her dark hair circled in an Italian scarf, a black shirt of thin lawn and white Dietrich slacks. Her admission card was a scrawled note from a friend, one of the fur designers.

Waving credentials and invitations the struggling, pushing throng was held back by a tall young man and six nervous-eyed girl officials. The young man shouted and remonstrated to no effect. Within the first admission compound, two female clerks tried vainly to check the eligibility of names on long lists.

Women crawled under the baize-covered tables used as entrance blocks. Nancy White, editor-in-chief of Harper's Bazaar, feeling faint in the pressing crowds, was finally partly lifted, partly thrust past the guards, her face chalk-white and her blue linen frock no longer the cool, neat garment Harper's advocates for its readers on a European summer jaunt.

The problem began with the issue of more invitations by the seven furriers than the accommodation could support. They gave liberally to devoted clients, to past and present cutters and valued assistants outside the eligibility framework.

Visiting press from Australia and some two dozen other countries, along with buyers from London, New York, Athens and Hong Kong, lost place in the scramble.

Sheer Look in Legs Aids Girl Watchers

TORONTO (CP) — There's a sheer-to-the-waist number which will give girl-watchers something to think about.

There's also an opaque item which becomes less opaque the bigger the figure, which also provokes thought.

In the three years or so that panty-hose have come on the market many stylish women have happily abandoned stockings at 50 cents a pair and adopted the $2 sheer long johns.

Now retailers are saying that panty sales are declining almost as rapidly as panty-hose sales are rising.

Sam Fleming, buyer for a department store, says that one-piecers now account for between 50 and 60 per cent of his nylon and panty-hose volume.

The biggest action is in $2 versions with sheer, suntan-colored legs. His advice if you want the best is to buy the sheer-looking but still long-lasting no-runs. It's true they can still be pulled into holes, but they don't ladder.

As a bonus, says Susan Karol, vice-president of a hosiery firm, this garment is so built that when you get a run you can cut off the legs and keep the bikini.

Broad windows dramatize the mountain setting of this vacation cabin while the lack of walls brings the open feeling indoors, despite the limited space. Also contributing to the spacious appearance of the room is the soaring ceiling over the living area. A conventional bedroom is above the kitchen and dining area, creating the normal height ceiling, while the low bench in the living-room can be used for two extra beds. (Photo by Jeremiah O. Cabin Brings Outdoors Inside

Fortunate are you who own a house or lot in a vacation area. Not only is it fun and relaxing for yourselves, but you build warm family memories for your children. Requisites for a cottage away from home usually include small size, expandable sleeping facilities and a design that makes the most of the natural surroundings.

Shown here is a mountain cabin by Warren Fuller and Jack Arrisson, Fuller and Tajima, Architects, which exemplifies all three items. In spite of the actual small size, the cabin seems spacious, due to the open plan, the two storey height of the living area, and the broad windows that fill the entire exterior wall. The windows serve a double purpose, to render the wall non-existent and to dramatize the woodsy setting. Even when you are inside this house you know you are in the mountains.

The third requisite, that of expandable sleeping quarters is met by the low bench built along one wall. As shown, with pads and heaped with pillows, the benches offer comfortable seating and make into two single beds. In addition, the tops lift up next to the wall and unfolds to lie flat on the floor, creating two, low double beds.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Fixture, Not Wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: After almost 35 years, I am thinking of leaving my husband. There seems to be a big wall between us. We rarely go anywhere, and when he is home there is practically no conversation between us.

I don't think I've grown repulsive to look at. I keep my self neat and clean, and I keep a nice house. (I can't even call it a home.)

Abby, I have seen retired couples, some in their seventies, walking arm in arm with such beautiful looks of affection and tenderness between them that I wonder what is wrong with us?

We are in our middle fifties. Am I expecting too much? Or must I continue to be a fixture in our house instead of a wife? Your opinion, and that of your readers, would be most welcome. — Lonely Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Tenderness and affection are not gifts. They must be earned. And the way to get is to give. When was the last time you told your husband you loved him. (Or have you been waiting all this time for him to tell you?)

Perhaps you've had it too good. It's a sad fact, but illness, problems, and adversity sometimes draw a couple together. Don't wait for a tragedy to awaken you to reality. Try to put a little happiness into his life, and it will come back into your own.

DEAR ABBY: Boy, when you give bad advice, do you ever give bad advice! I'm referring to what you told "WENDY," the girl whose boyfriend stands her up about half the time. The word from you was to lose him.

Just because a guy doesn't always show up doesn't mean he's no good. A lot of things can happen to keep a guy from showing up.

Try being on the guy's side for a change, Abby, and maybe you will have even more understanding than you already have. — M.W.R., Terre Haute.

DEAR M.W.R.: I realize that a guy (or a girl) can occasionally be unable to keep a date, and unable to let the other party know. But half the time? Sorry, but the word from here is still lose him.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "TIRED OFFICE MANAGER" who was amazed at what came in to apply for an office job.

Don't feel bad. When I owned by own business I ran an ad for a male or female who could make telephone contacts and deal with the public. The applicants who applied included:

A 24-year-old male. Handsome, two years of college, well groomed. He informed me that his only problem in doing telephone work was that the zero and the O confused him.

—A 19-year-old girl, high school graduate. She said the job would have to include living facilities with me because she had informed her family that she would be living with her boss.

A 32-year-old man. Third grade education. He assured me that even though he could neither read nor write he could "talk real good on the telephone."

And the piece de resistance: A transvestite, college-educated, married with two small children. He asked me if he could perform his duties dressed as a female, and then change to male attire when business hours were over.

Want to know who I hired for the job? A 15-year-old clean cut girl who came to the interview with her father. She readily admitted that she had never worked before but she wanted to give it a try. She turned out to be the most valuable employee I had. — P.D. in L.A.

Worried Mother Plans Strategy

By PENNY SAVER

The woman standing next to me was chuckling the kind of sneaky chuckle of someone anticipating a victory.

"Yes," she whispered under her breath. "It just might work."

I gave her a long, vacant stare—at least I tried to make it long and vacant—and it served its purpose. Blushing a little, she began to explain in a somewhat embarrassed tone.

"My daughter has decided to use the money she earned this summer for a trip to Europe instead of university fees. She's convinced she can get a job — and I am quite sure she can — but I just know she won't write."

"So I have decided on a strategem." Here the woman bent over to the display and picked up a packet.

"What girl," she asked dramatically shaking it in my face, "could resist writing to her mother — or at least her friends who will call her mother and give her the news — on THIS?"

Leaning back somewhat so my eyes could focus, I observed that what she was shaking in front of my nose was a package of lavender air mail paper with matching envelopes.

Each packet costs $2 and contains 15 air mail envelopes (saying air mail in two languages on either side of a very thin blue and red line) and 30 sheets of matching paper — very exclusive. This paper also comes in white and air mail paper blue.

Snoopy and Flowers

I smiled bravely, knowing that nothing, but nothing will make a daughter write, and lied: "Fantastic strategem! I'll remember it when mine does the same."

Beaming and chuckling, the woman left for the counter, several packages clutched in her arms.

If beautiful writing paper is an inducement to letter writing, the Victoria post office is due for a rush. A lovely line of decorated papers has recently gone on sale here.

At $2 a packet there are sets with 15 envelopes and 30 sheets of writing paper, while at $2.50 there are similar sets in a larger format.

These sets are in pastel shades with floral decorations to match the background color. The envelopes, needless to say, match the paper.

While the majority of sets follow this floral theme, some are different. One I saw has the flowers in a border around the paper which has scalloped edges while in another the pattern is embossed on both paper and envelope.

Another set for $1.75 has Snoopy, the intrepid beagle, in the corner. This set is in white and red and comes with 15 envelopes, 15 decorated sheets and 10 plain sheets.

Also at $1.75 are sets in plain, but elegant pastels. The paper in these sets is thin, but not as fine as onion skin. The envelopes are double-lined so no writing shows through. These sets come in white, blue, green and pink.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

I have a problem that has been bothering not only me but many home sewers I talk with. Every sewing book I have read describes various types of materials, but not one tells how to know the right side from the wrong side. Mrs. W. L. S.

Dear Mrs. W. L. S.:

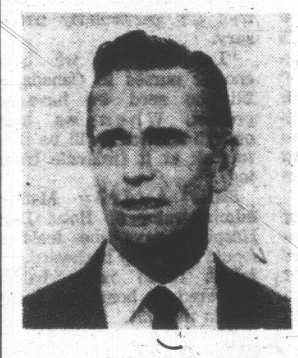

The simplest method of deciding the right from the wrong side of your fabric is to closely examine the selvage edge. As a general rule, wool is folded with the right side inside, from that point on, there is no general rule. Imported fabrics are usually rolled on tubes, silks are usually rolled on tubes, so in this case there would be no easy way of deciding. If you will examine the selvage closely you will note that the right side of the fabric usually has a more finished edge.

If you honestly can't tell a difference, it won't make that much difference, just be certain to cut all the pieces of your fabric on the same side. Many times the fabric will appear identical on both sides while it is flat on a table but would pick up different highlights when assembled.

Send for "Your Pattern and You," Eunice Farmer's booklet on how to fit a pattern for a garment that will flatter you, for extra help in your sewing. Enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents with your request and mail it to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

'All You Women Please Vote'

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Calling all women! Calling all women!

This is a lead-in I've used before. I'm using it again in the belief that women who glance at it will also read to the end of this column. It's written for them.

Forbes

A week today, Wednesday, August 27, you will have an opportunity to make known, through your vote, the men and women whom you wish to see working for you in the next government of British Columbia. I'm asking you therefore, at this time and at this moment, to make a pledge that you will vote.

The reason I am doing this a week ahead is so you will be sure to keep time clear to visit the polling booth to which you have been assigned (check that notice from the registrar of voters which came a few days ago) and mark your ballot.

Don't procrastinate. Don't shrug your shoulders and tell me "my little old vote won't change the fate of the province."

Don't say you are too busy, or too tired, or too tied up with a bridge game, or that you are "really not interested."

If you are registered — and I hope every last one of you is — don't leave it to the other fellow. Vote!

★ ★ ★

This is the time to show an adult approach to public affairs. To prove that you have a mature and informed interest in the governing of your province.

You know that in your personal spheres of work, your home, office or your professions, you must have the latest equipment in order that everything will run smoothly and well. You chose that equipment yourself.

You also know that the better the equipment, the better chance there is of it being a success in your home, your office or your profession.

The men and women elected work for you. Not you for them. Remember this next week when you vote.

You owe that much to the women who from the early 1880's worked tirelessly to bring you many of the freedoms you enjoy in this province of ours, including the right to vote.

★ ★ ★

Judge Emily Murphy (Janey Canuck to her contemporaries) was the first woman in the British Empire to be appointed a police magistrate and the originator and leader of a movement that changed the BNA to give women the right to be called "persons" and to sit in the Senate of Canada.

Mrs. Gordon Grant drew up the first suffrage petition in British Columbia in 1885 and headed a delegation to the legislature almost every year after that until we were given the vote in 1917.

Mary Ellen Smith, first woman to sit in the British Columbia legislature; Helen Gregory McGill, first woman juvenile court judge in the British Empire; our own Nancy Hodges, first woman in the Commonwealth to be named Speaker of the House — and so many others there is no room here to name them all.

They met the challenge of their time. It's up to you — the women now eligible to vote — to carry on for them.

★ ★ ★

How you vote is your own affair. That too, is a freedom you enjoy.

However if you wish to prove that women have an intelligent understanding of the needs of our province today, then you have no better way than by exercising the franchise won for you years ago.

Go now to your calendar. Put a ring around the date, August 27. The write across it in big, bold letters the word VOTE.

Nothing would please me more than to find after the election is over that the number of women voters had increased by a healthy percentage.

In fact, I've gone out on a limb and I've made a bet that this will happen because women are more interested in the present election than they have been for years.

Don't let me down. PLEASE GET OUT AND VOTE!

Fatal Fall

WARSAW (Reuters)—The Polish Army's long jump champion, Wiktor Godlewski, 20, died in hospital after falling from a second-floor hotel window, a Warsaw newspaper reported Wednesday. Godlewski was sleeping on a mattress on the window sill because of the heat and rolled off during the night to the street below.

RAIN FREES TRACTOR VICTIM

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A college professor who farms as a hobby says he was pinned five days under an overturned tractor until rains softened the earth so he could crawl out.

Dr. Julius E. Schulz, 55, was in hospital here with fractured ribs and possible internal injuries.

"Thank God, he's a strong man" his wife said Monday. "A lesser man could not have survived."

Ottawa Seeks Joint Attack On Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — A joint federal-provincial approach to water conservation requiring the polluters of water to pay for correcting the damage done, is being prepared by the federal government.

A policy embodying the proposals is expected to be issued soon by Otto Lang, minister in charge of energy and water resources.

It is believed the statement proposes new legislation replacing the 1953 Canada Water Conservation Act which has proved to be too restrictive for general application.

Under the new plan, informants say, the federal government will try to establish intergovernmental committees composed of federal and provincial officials to examine all water pollution problems.

The joint approach would get around the jurisdictional problem of determining which lakes and rivers are of federal concern, and which are provincial.

Individual areas of pollution control, whether lake or river basins, would be governed by water quality management bodies appointed by the two levels of government and representing local interests. Each would be an independent corporation, with its headquarters in its own area.

These bodies would be empowered to determine what needs to be done to overcome pollution, and to set fees for industries or others using water for the disposal of their waste products.

The fees would be sufficient to cover the cost of overcoming pollution.

Drunks of Bowery Find New Hope

By JOE NICHOLSON JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bowery—a haven of despair—now has a medical centre which offers some hope for the district's estimated 6,000 homeless alcoholics.

Centre officials concede though, that for most, the help is only temporary.

The Manhattan Bowery Project operates a 48-bed hospital which sobers up drunken alcoholics for five days and refers them to follow-up programs.

It does not, however, provide the long-term psychiatric treatment which most need for full recovery. And, its first annual report says, the age, degree of sickness and poverty of most Bowery alcoholics make complete recovery an impractical goal.

"A Bowery man can lengthen his average time between benders from a few weeks to months," the report says. "He can obtain better-paying jobs for longer periods of time. He can make better use of the city's health resources."

"It is an alternative to arrest that gives the men a new chance at life," said Dr. Robert P. Morgan, medical director of the centre's 47-member staff. The centre, opened in November, 1967, operates with city, state and federal financing.

The report says that during the first year 53 per cent of the centre's 2,387 patients were placed in a variety of follow-up programs.

BEST-KNOWN SKID ROAD

Originally an Indian trail, the avenue derives its name from the Dutch word for farm—bouwerij—because it became the link between the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam on the tip of Manhattan Island and the farms to the north. It has become the country's best-known skid road.

William Harris, which isn't his real name, is a former patient who returned to the Bowery, where he drinks and sometimes sleeps on the sidewalk. He recalled: "I was in the centre's hospital . . . and didn't drink a drop for four months straight. But then I got a pocket full of money and come back to the Bowery and started drinking again."

Harris is not an exceptional case. The report says a preliminary study of 100 patients showed that three months after discharge only 17 per cent of them were known to be sober and either working or in an organized program.

Like the average alcoholic the report describes, Harris is of middle age and has been living on the Bowery for many years. Like half of the centre's patients, he is a military veteran.

Harris was lying in a drunken stupor on an icy Bowery sidewalk last winter when a two-man rescue team from the centre offered assistance. He accepted, as do 67 per cent of the drunks approached.

Like 97 per cent of a sample of patients discussed in the report, Harris is unmarried. Nearly half had never married. The remainder were divorced, separated or widowed.

LSD, Pot 'Peanuts'

CALGARY (CP)—Drugs such as marijuana and LSD are "peanuts" when compared to alcohol and tobacco, Winnipeg pathologist Dr. Donald Penner told the 21st annual western Canada school of alcohol and narcotic education this week.

Drug Report To Include Local Survey

A 700-page B.C Narcotics Addiction Foundation report on drug taking by high school students will include 100 pages on a survey undertaken in Greater Victoria high schools.

E. G. Callbeck, co-ordinator of the board's special education services, told trustees Monday that the Narcotics Addiction Foundation report, originally expected in June, should be completed sometime this month.

He said Dr. John S. Russell, a foundation research associate, had told him preparation of the report had proven to be a much bigger job than expected.

Callbeck was asked whether consideration had been given to the idea of bringing former addicts into schools as part of the board's drug education program.

He replied he once considered approaching the RCMP to refer him to some former drug user, but dropped the idea because of possible opposition from parents and school trustees.

"You don't know what these people will say in a classroom," he said.

Deer Policy Reversed For Economy

WELLINGTON (Reuters) — New Zealand has reversed its policy of trying to exterminate deer as pests and is encouraging farms to build up domestic herds.

The reason is mainly economic. Exported venison and other game meats produced a revenue of $3,000,000 in 1968. Most of the shipments went to western Europe. Venison made up about two-thirds of the total followed by wild pork and wild goat.

Current experiments with deer farms show that the domesticated animal is nearly three times heavier than the 100-pound wild deer.

Early European settlers introduced deer for sporting purposes from England and, later, from North America.

New Zealand's mountainous areas suited them. They thrived and ran wild in the high country until over the years the herds grew to several million. They came to be regarded as a dangerous pest—a menace to native bush and high country pasture.

In a campaign to control numbers, the government employed cullers to shoot them. There are also many deer-stalking associations throughout the two islands.

But in recent years professional deer hunters who entered the field for the export of venison experienced a "deer bonanza."

Queries Seen On U.S. Pact With Thailand

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers is expected to be asked Wednesday to clarify the Nixon administration's position on the secret 1965 United States-Thai plan for possible use of American combat troops to help defend Thailand.

Rogers has scheduled a press conference for 11 a.m. Wednesday. This will be his first general meeting with newsmen here since the intensification of the controversy, in which there were several more developments Tuesday.

According to Senate sources, there are two separate issues involved in the differences between the senate foreign relations committee and the administration.

GREATER ISSUE

The greater issue, according to these sources, is whether the president would have authority to send U.S. troops into Thailand as an act in fulfillment of the SEATO treaty, without further discussion with, or authorization by, the congress.

Khoman was quoted as telling newsmen in Bangkok that his country, in any event, "will not put forward an appeal or a call for American manpower" and "we shall deal with the problem ourselves" if challenged by any kind of covert Communist invasion.

Thanat said he told that to President Nixon last month.

The defence department was reported earlier Tuesday to have said that two senators, armed services committee chairman John C. Stennis (D—Miss.) and Sen. Stuart Symington (D—Mo.) already have examined the secret plan at the Pentagon.

If so, that could have dulled the disagreement over senatorial access to it, for Symington heads a senate foreign relations subcommittee investigating this plan, which is several hundred pages long, and related topics.

An official defence department statement Tuesday night made no claim that senators already have studied the plan itself.

Instead, assistant defence secretary Daniel Z. Henkin was quoted as saying, in response to newsmen's inquiries, that:

"... Two senators, Stennis and Symington, had visited the Pentagon on separate occasions" and (Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird) "had discussed with them the Thai contingency plan."

"It was also stated that arrangements were being made but not yet completed for Sen. (J. William) Fulbright," chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, "to visit the Pentagon at his earliest convenience.

HAD BEEN INVITED

It was indicated that he had been invited to lunch to discuss the contingency plan, among other matters."

Secretary Rogers told Fulbright's committee last month that it could see the plan. Later, however, the defence department said it would have to be inspected at the Pentagon.

Fulbright, Symington and Stennis all were unavailable for comment Tuesday. It was learned, however, that Symington visited the Pentagon last Tuesday.

Symington said later, that day, on the senate floor, that:

"... The present secretary of defence states that, if this matter comes up again from the standpoint of any contingent agreement, he believes it is a matter which should be taken up with the congress."

Husband Has No Clue in Tate Death

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Fighting back tears, Polish film director Roman Polanski called his 20-month marriage to slain actress Sharon Tate "the only time of true happiness in my life."

"There were agonies of separation," he told a news conference Tuesday, "which I was always trying to dismiss with laughter and silly jokes."

Polanski offered no clue to the killer or killers of his 26-year-old wife, 8½ months pregnant, who was slain 11 days ago with four others in the Polanskis' rented $200,000 mansion in exclusive Bel Air.

The 36-year-old director of Rosemary's Baby and other bizarre films said:

"There was a lot of talks about parties going on in our house, which are true. There was a constant party. There wasn't an evening without friends."

Polanski said two of the others slain, his Polish friend Voityck Frokowsky, 37, and hair stylist Jay Sebring, 35, "smoked pot sometimes." But Miss Tate, he said, "not only didn't use drugs, but didn't touch alcohol, didn't smoke cigarettes."

He said Frokowsky and another victim, coffee heiress Abigail Folker, 26, "were often guests in our house in our evenings."

Health Costs Under Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Guides for setting doctors' fees, penalties for abuse of hospital or medical plans and widened insurance coverage for services of several health professions will be studied this fall by federal and provincial health ministers.

Reliable sources say a long list of proposals will go before the health ministers who set up several study groups last year to recommend ways to control rising health-care costs without harming service to patients.

One study has concluded that increases in doctors' fees are less responsible for higher health-care costs than increases in hospital and other bills.

The health ministers are urged to foster incomes for doctors that repay the high expenses for their long training years and also provide for a comfortable retirement.

It is proposed that when fee schedules reach "acceptable" levels, changes should be based on agreed wages, prices and other indexes so that future fees and costs will keep in step with the economy of the country or the provinces.

On abuse of health plans, the health ministers will examine several suggestions, including one that doctors who "oversservice" patients—provide more treatment than required—be paid at lower rates than their colleagues. Patient abuse of the plans would mean a penalty of reduced payment on his claim.

Studies have shown—in Saskatchewan and elsewhere—that apparent abuses can be detected statistically and more fully investigated.

The ministers will be asked to endorse the idea that insurance plans exclude coverage of such experimental procedures as heart transplants.

At the same time, they are to examine the possibilities of covering the costs of services by health personnel such as public health nurses, social workers, physiotherapists and dietitians.

'I'm the Greatest'

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland has reached a crisis equal to the bank failure of the 1890s and the period during the late 1940s when she was trying to decide whether to remain independent, enter some kind of union with the United States or become a Canadian province, Premier Joseph Smallwood said Tuesday night.

And she will need a strong, daring, energetic leader willing to "go anywhere on earth to drum up business" if she is going to solve the crisis caused by a population growing faster than the supply of jobs, he said.

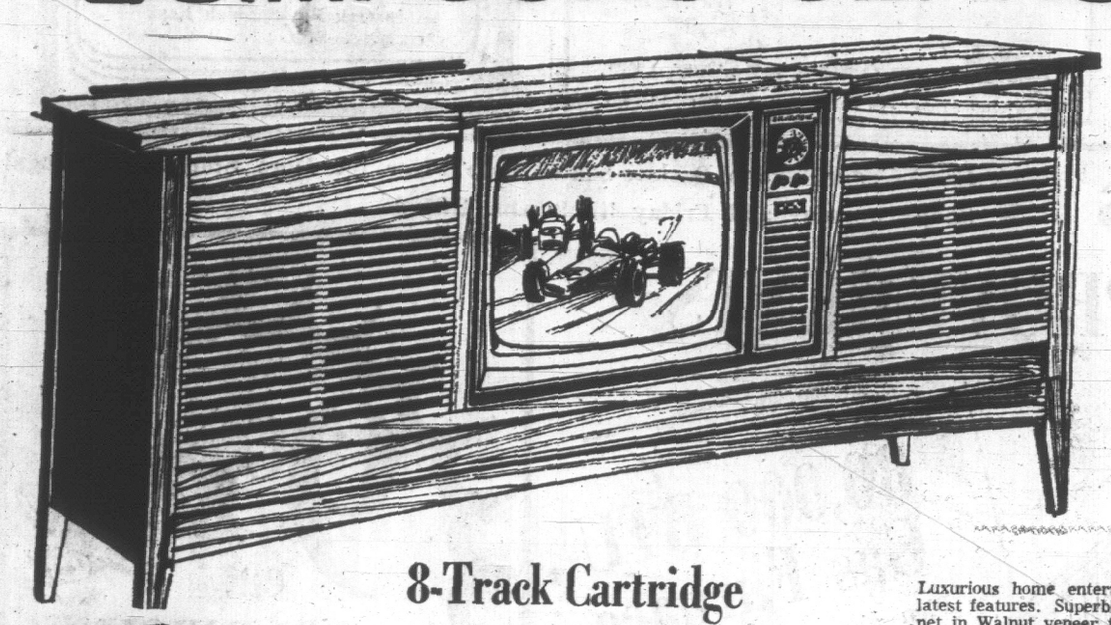

The premier, continuing the campaign he launched officially Monday night for the Liberal leadership convention Oct. 31-Nov. 1, reiterated his theme that this is no time for commissions or committees. None of these can do the job of a strong, healthy leader, he said.

"And it's indecent how healthy I am," the 69-year-old premier told an audience of 100 persons in a tiny meeting hall here.

He repeatedly compared himself to Newfoundland's great leaders of the past—Sir Robert Bond, Sir Richard Squires and Sir William Whiteway—and said he had been elected more times than any of them. Newfoundland needs another man like these men at this time, he said.

'Wonder Metal' Opens U.S. Door

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has started selling large amounts of titanium—once called the wonder metal of the 1960s—to the United States.

Titanium is being used increasingly in American military as well as civilian aircraft.

A few weeks ago the first Soviet merchant ship to call on the United States this decade docked at Seattle to deliver 900 tons of sponge titanium —as it is referred to in its intermediate production form.

And now officials say the same ship is bringing another big load to the United States next month.

The Russians sent only 421 tons of sponge titanium to the United States in all of 1968, with ships of other flags carrying it.

The United States has a domestic titanium production capacity of its own but is unable to compete with Soviet or Japanese prices.

Some officials suspect the Russians may be trying to undercut the fledgling U.S. titanium industry, possibly to disrupt its progress.

Last year the tariff commission ruled the Russians were guilty of "dumping" titanium on the U.S. market and said a dumping charge would be added to the cost of the Soviet metal. Presumably any U.S. company buying from the Russians may have to absorb the dumping charge.

ELEVEN YEARS after he resigned as organist and choirmaster at Christ Church Anglican Cathedral, Graham Steed returns to Victoria Saturday to give an organ recital in St. John's Church at 8 p.m. He is now resident organist at Immanuel Church, Hartford, Connecticut, and has given recitals in various countries of Europe. His Victoria concert will include works by Bach, Cesar Franck and Hermann Schroeder.

International Unions 'Best'

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (CP) — Donald MacDonald, president of the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, called today for the extension of international trade unionism as a protection for workers throughout the world.

MacDonald, speaking at the biennial convention of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers, said giant international trade unions will be needed to protect workers' interests against giant international conglomerate businesses.

"In the face of the development of international conglomerates the need for broad international trade unionism is today far greater than at any time in our history.

"If the interests of workers throughout the world are to be protected, this principle of international trade unionism will have to be much further extended."

The CLC chief said there is much criticism of international unions in Canada but the critics "conveniently ignore the fact that the corporations for whom the trade union members work are becoming more and more international."

He said that about 70 per cent of trade union members in Canada are members of international unions.

Membership in international unions, MacDonald said, is just plain sense in a number of industries and as far as Canadian members were concerned it provided far greater union strength than would otherwise be within their reach.

Rock Show Called Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — A rock festival planned for the Squamish area north or Vancouver this weekend has been called off.

Bert Gartner, head of Candi Promotions and organizer of the festival originally scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Paradise Valley resort, said he would try to find another location.

He said he called the festival off because of opposition from residents of the Squamish area.

WHEN FORTUNES FALL TEA PICKS YOU UP

LLITHFAEN, Waltes (AP) — Elizabeth Williams, 78, fell 500 feet down a cliff and then insisted that she be taken home for a cup of tea.

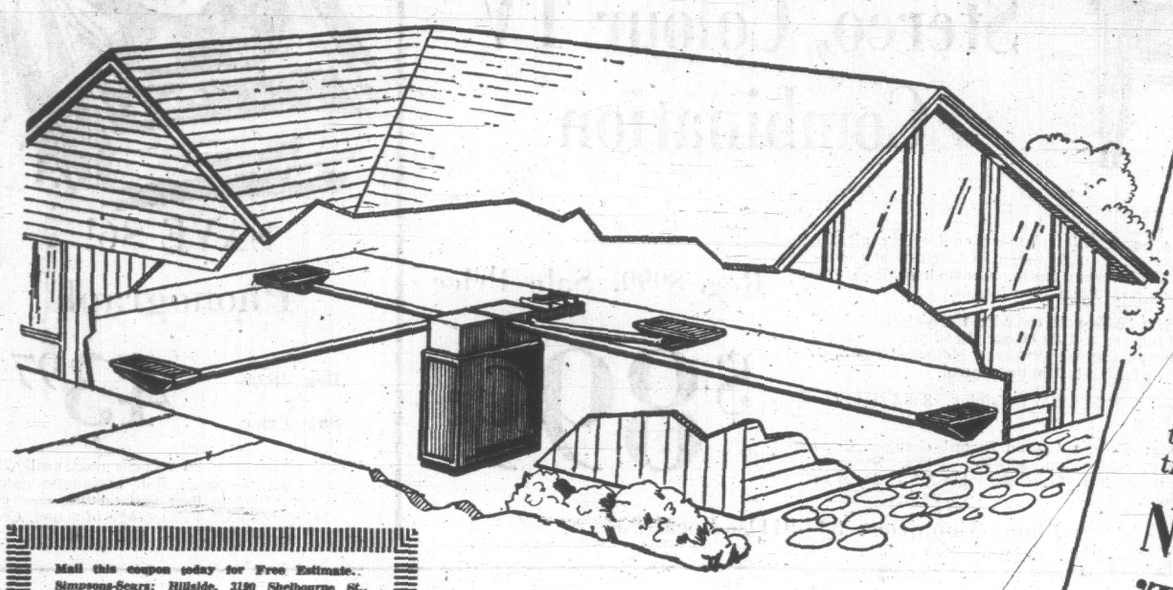

"She is the toughest and luckiest old dear I have ever met," said Lieut. Alan Mawby, navigator of the RAF helicopter which found her Tuesday after a 20-hour search.

Despite Mrs. Williams' hankering for tea in her own parlor, she was taken to hospital for observation.

Quebec Teachers Strike Settlement Expected in a Few Days

QUEBEC (CP) — Negotiators trying to end a two-year contract dispute between Quebec's 70,000 teachers and their school boards were scheduled to report today to a permanent cabinet commission on the progress of their discussions.

Raymond Laliberte, president of the 60,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, said Tuesday that teachers would be back to work on schedule in September as long as "we can agree on four or five clauses of a new contract in the next few days."

Reports Monday about an agreement in principle ending the dispute annoyed Mr. Laliberte.

He said it was unfortunate that promises to keep the agreement secret had been broken Monday by Jean Cournoyer, chief negotiator for the school boards and the government, and Marcel Masse, minister responsible for the civil service.

He said no collective agreement was possible before retroactivity clauses were accepted, legal actions taken by both sides were settled and re-hiring of an estimated 16,000 teachers who resigned last May was completed.

Mr. Masse said "a few legal points remain to be settled," but the strike was over as far as he was concerned.

TALKS STARTED IN 1967

The province's primary and secondary teachers have been negotiating with the government and school boards for a new, province-wide contract since June, 1967.

The agreement in principle would have to be ratified by the presidents of 64 associations affiliated with the QTC as well as by about 10,000 English-speaking members of the Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers and the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

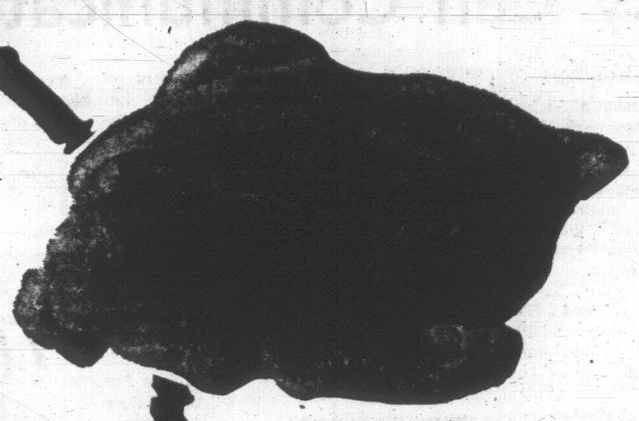

Directors of the two English-speaking associations Tuesday gave their approval to the contract.

Retroactive pay, teacher-pupil ratios, curriculum decision-making, workload and teacher classification were major points of disagreement in the dispute.

The two-year negotiations were punctuated by spot strikes, a march by 20,000 teachers on the provincial capital and mass resignations in May.

Leader, Policy Critics Top Candidates Meet

By SUSAN RILEY

Criticism of party policies and leaders took precedence over local issues at a fast-paced Victoria riding all-candidates meeting Tuesday.

Five of seven candidates in the two-seat riding delivered seven-minute speeches at a Victoria Kiwanis luncheon meeting in the Empress.

Liberal Ian Stewart, who was with party leader Pat McGeer, and Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings recovering from a fall, did not attend.

'DEATH ALLEY'

New Democratic Party candidate Peter Bunn said the election is "pregnant with issues." Of special local concern is the Patricia Bay Highway, "a death alley."

"A few yards of fresh blacktop rolled on the edges of the Pat Bay is not the answer," he said.

He decried Social Credit inaction on pollution, education and hospital problems. The waiting list for elective surgery today is longer than it was 17 years ago and Premier Bennett shoves responsibility "to the local level."

Public Works Minister William Chant said hospital services will pick up when "the hospital boards come through. The department of health will meet them then."

EXCITING PROGRESS

He praised the government's sound administration which resulted in exciting progress in power and industry.

Provincal buildings are erected on a pay-as-you-go basis, he said, adding that Glendale Hospital and the vocational school at Interurban Road will pay for themselves.

Admitting that the Social Credit record shows progress, he warned: "We in B.C. aren't the only ones who have progressed. Don't be confused by that."

The Liberals are the only "true free enterprise party" and will ensure that industrial progress will continue and increase.

AS AN ALTERNATIVE

"I won't discuss policy today — though we have 107 policies — because that is not the issue. The issue here is free enterprise as an alternative to Socred and NDP policies."

He challenged NDP candidates to "remove the shadow of doubt regarding American unions contributing to campaign funds."

NDP candidate Phil Fawcett said the Victoria organization did not receive "one single, solitary cent from any trade union."

Fawcett, in answer to a question from the floor, said the NDP plans no takeover of any privately-owned company in B.C.

"Bennett has said the NDP is going to take over farms. That leaves him only one more fairy tale. If the NDP gets in they are going to catch all little girls and boys, pop them in an oven, and eat them.

"How far can this go?" he asked.

CONDEMN ALL PARTIES

Independent candidate Bill Scott, 72, opened with his campaign song then went on to condemn all the parties. "They are trying to buy votes," he said.

He said he has $500 invested in the campaign which is going to the Red Cross to help life-saving classes.

He suggested the other parties spend campaign money on education and hospitals instead of using it for advertising, "and brainwashing the people."

He shook the advertisement several times throughout his speech saying: "Don't let them buy your votes."

YOUTH IN CENTENNIAL SQUARE gets its own session with Liberal leader Pat McGeer when he stopped Tuesday for a box lunch and a chance to "communicate" with the Square's regulars. McGeer found himself explaining where his party stands in the generation gap.

Esquimalt Meet Ends in Shouts

Laughter and name-calling erupted in Metchosin Hall Tuesday night as 150 packed an Esquimalt all-candidates meeting that lasted two hours longer than planned.

In a rollicking question period, J. J. Zubick of 4982 William Head asked for candidates' opinions on Premier Bennett's reference to the New Democratic Party as "Godless socialists." He also criticized the name-calling which has marked this election.

Social Credit candidate Herb Bruch said he speaks only for himself and doesn't like name-calling.

"Don't you believe everything your leader says," he was asked.

"No," shouted Bruch. "I don't believe everything anybody says."

'RUBBISH'

Then Socred supporter Anna Rands of 642 Taylor, RR1, jumped up amidst laughter and applause to say: "I'm going to start calling bigger names than anyone's heard."

Zubick told her: "Don't look at me. I'm just an old Tory. That's the party Bennett stabbed in the back."

In a 15-minute prepared speech, Bruch said he was happy a petition to amalgamate Colwood, Langford and Metchosin was defeated three months ago.

"There are individuals living here and you came to an unorganized area to escape regulation and taxation. I think you were wise."

BURNING SEWAGE

A system of burning sewage is being studied by the provincial government, he said. Such a system would be safer than septic tanks used now in the unorganized area and cheaper than sewer lines.

"We need a system like this and some planning for this area, not just a bunch of regulations."

Gorst said a publicly-owned emergency hospital service is urgently needed for the 30,000 who live between View Royal and Port Renfrew.

Residents in this part of the riding who break a leg or cut themselves have to go all the way to Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria.

St. Mary's Priory in Colwood isn't equipped to handle emergencies, he said.

FROM RESOURCES

Money for education, sewerage and hospitals should come from development of B.C.'s resources instead of property tax, he said.

Liberal candidate Fred Phillips called for "integrity, honesty and dignity in politics." He said he visited the House often and was ashamed of the MLA's conduct.

He said the education system ignores the extra bright and the slow child.

"In schools here the above-average child is being held back. Why? They should be allowed to write exams when they feel they are ready."

BY USING SCHOOLS

All candidates agreed that regional library service for the unorganized part of the riding could be provided by using schools which are empty in the summer and evenings.

"Remember later that we all agreed on regional library service.

"It may be the last time this will ever happen," Phillips said.

At times three people jumped up at once to fire questions on everything from Commonwealth Trust to the standard of living in Ceylon.

In a heated exchange with students in the audience, Bruch denied that the election was called in the summer to thwart student voters.

"You don't want anybody to vote who you think might go against you," said a voice from the back.

"There is such a thing as absentee voting, you know," said Bruch.

The meeting was arranged by the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association.

YOUTH, POLITICIANS TALK

They Can Communicate

By ROBIN BURGESS

A panel discussion at Victoria senior secondary school on "What's not happening in Victoria" turned on itself and eliminated the negative as local politicians and young people happily discovered Tuesday afternoon they could communicate with each other.

Aldermen Clyde Savage, Leslie Passmore, and NDP candidates Peter Bunn and Phil Fawcett nodded in agreement as young people spoke out against the $2 million Central Park pool complex and suggested instead a number of small "drop-in" centres where young people could meet, drink coffee, and talk.

"Sure swimming is cool," said an unidentified youth, "But I don't know anybody who wants to spend a Friday evening swimming. I think a central meeting place would be more useful."

Savage said that young people failed to offer any opposition to the swimming pool while the plan was under discussion in council.

WHAT CITY WANTS

"I didn't hear one word from youth while the complex was being discussed. The council seems to think it's what the city wants."

"Youth just isn't organized, said Susan Vickers, a Summer of Service volunteer.

Fawcett suggested that "if youth could set up a committee and draw up a brief listing their objections to the proposed complex and proposing alternate suggestions and present the brief to the council I think something might happen."

Rev. Walter Donald, moderator of the discussion, spoke of his "dream" of seeing youth observers at every council and school board meeting.

GETTING FEEDBACK

Bunn, former chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, agreed and said, "one of the things that has bothered us most on the school board is getting feedback — feedback from the parents and from students."

Both Savage and Saanich council member Passmore said that they would welcome young observers at their council meetings, and both "guaranteed" that constructive comments would be heard.

Over 200 people, the majority under 25, watched a thoughtful, stark youth-made film on the dangers of "speed" (methadrine) during which 16 local young users of the drug spoke hopelessly about their dependence on "speed" and the devastating physical effect it is having on their bodies.

FULLY AWARE

Attempts were made to encourage the audience to discuss why young people, fully aware of the danger of drugs such as speed and heroin, will still turn to them.

Susan Langlois, of the family and children's court, felt that drug-users are trying to discover themselves. She added, "The alternative is to get involved with other people. They're the ones that will tell you about yourself."

Some young people in the audience gave testimonies on the effects of "mind-expanding" drugs on their lives and their contempt of "society."

Tenders To Close

Tenders on the $480,000 addition to Braefoot Elementary will close Sept. 18, the Greater Victoria school board announced Monday.

Braefoot, last of the board's major construction projects for this year was one of three school district 61 projects which received government approval last week.

Trustee Hamilton Smith said the two minor projects—additions to Margaret Jenkins Elementary and Bank St. Elementary—will be submitted to tender later this fall.

Smith said that school facilities will be generally ready as planned in time for school opening Sept. 2.

Lou to Join Leslie In Starring TV Role

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Comedy and romantic series led the way and now Lou Rawls figures its time for Negro entertainers to star in their own television variety series.

"Nat Cole tried it, but he was too early," says the 31-year-old soul singer. "Sammy Davis tried it but there wasn't enough of him on the show. Now television is ready for Negroes to head up variety hours. After all, most shows have at least one Negro act. Why not one in which a Negro is the star?"

The leader in the this field will be Leslie Uggams, who is starring for CBS this fall in her own variety show, replacing the Smothers Brothers.

Rawls also is ready. He is one of the top sellers in the record business and has appeared on most of the variety shows. This summer he's getting on-the-job training for his own show by starring on NBC's Dean Martin Presents the Golddiggers.

SANG IN CHOIR

His songs seem indeed to come from the soul, and that's only natural. He began singing at seven in a Chicago church choir and his first job after high school was with a gospel group, the Pilgram Travellers.

"People claimed I sold out when I turned from gospel singing to the popular field," he says. "I didn't sell out, and I didn't change. I'm still singing the same way I did then."

After a couple of years as a paratrooper, Rawls went through the dreary routine of singing in bars and clubs on the road. It was tough but rewarding schooling, and in 1961 he was tapped for a Capitol Records contract.

"I'm an album singer mostly. My early albums sold between 45,000 and 50,000, which wasn't bad at all. That allowed me to work around the country in some of the better places, building up an audience all the time. That helped build the albums until I hit with Lou Rawls Live which sold 2,000,000 copies in a week and a half."

Rawls began clicking in television in 1965 with Steve Allen. Then came Bob Hope, Red Skelton and numerous other guest spots.

Copper, Silver Willow Tree

MONTREAL (CP) — Tourists are usually intrigued by local fads and entertainment, but guests arriving at Hotel Bonaventure this month have been curious about Montreal's vegetation too.

Planted alongside an oval-shaped driveway to the hotel entrance is a willow tree. However, instead of being green, its trunk is copper and the branches silver, with bucket-shaped steel objects balancing on them.

Other gilded and bronzed objects dot the lawn, blending easily with the more common chlorophyll-filled shrubs and bushes.

The explanation is simple—French-Canadian sculptor Jean-Paul Lemay is holding his first "vernissage" or exhibition. Most of his work is designed as outdoors decoration so nature provides a backdrop which is more effective than four walls and artificial lighting could be.

His exhibit comprises 20 large pieces created for the show—the first non-commissioned sculptures he has done in the last 15 years—and 18 scale models of previous works.

Now 41, Mr. Lemay was born in L'Annonciation, Que., and began studying his craft at the age of 16.

Festival 'Too Political, Too Moslem Dominated'

By JIM HOAGLAND

NAIROBI, Kenya (WP) — The first festival of pan-African culture, recently completed in Algiers, may have done more to divide than unite French and English speaking Africa.

The first reactions in some English-speaking countries is that the festival was neither very cultural nor very Pan-African.

Resentment is being expressed that the festival was too heavily political, French-speaking and Arab. Some of this was to be expected with Algeria picking up over half of the $8 million costs.

But there is a feeling that points like the following could have been handled with a little more Pan-Africanism:

● Virtually all of the 18 top culture prizes went to countries that are French speaking or Moslem dominated or, as was most often the case, countries that are both.

● The festival provided, and in fact encouraged propaganda forums for El Fatah in its guerrilla war against Israel. This presented a touchy situation for many black African nations that receive financial and technical aid from Israel, and which support her in the United Nations.

● Miriam Makeba's song of praise for Kwame Nkrumah was adjudged by everyone to be an artistic success, and was lavishly praised by her Algerian hosts.

The apparently gave little thought to the political embarrassment this could cause their brother delegation from Ghana, which kicked Nkrumah out in 1966.

The festival was hardly over before recriminations began. Kenya's dance troupe arrived home to say that only obvious bias kept it from winning a top prize.

Supporters of the festival argue with considerable merit that the French-speaking countries and particularly the Arab nations put much more into the festival and deserved lots of medals.

Certainly anyone who has seen the magnificent Guinea ballet would hardly doubt it was the best of its category.

But offence has been taken. Philip Ochieng, one of Kenya's most influential columnists, wrote a biting article in the nation this week in which he labelled the festival Pan-Arab.

Ochieng recalled an incident several years ago when London officialdom raised a hue and cry when a Senegalese dance troupe of women danced bare-breasted and then were forced to wear brassieres in order not to offend Her Majesty.

"Dancing with bras on was not part of our culture," Ochieng wrote.

"At the first Pan-African cultural festival, the same troupe was forced to wear bras to conform with the religio-cultural stipulations and ideals of the Arab-Muslim world. You call on people to demonstrate their cultures and then order them to behave like Arabs!"

HOME GARDEN

Suddenly Fall Is Around Corner

By HILDA BEASTALL

A favorite Pacific Coast saying is that if spring is late, the garden will catch up before summer, is half way through. This year around August 15, we could see that suddenly the garden had projected to the end of August.

Hilda

There were of course other aspects to this sudden change. Crows and starlings could be seen flocking on television aerials and crickts broke the silence of early darkness.

Then one morning, the lovelist of all fall garden flowers, the rosy lilac, crocus-like colchicums, greeted us. They seemed almost as astonished as we indeed were.

Overnight literally, the sharp pointed buds had pushed an inch above the level of baked soil. No sheath protects the blossoms, yet they opened in the sunshine on their second day without a blemish.

Closing into rose colored crayons at night and on dull days conserves their energies, and colchicums last a long time. Their size increases until the flowers are goblet-like when half open, and six pointed flat stars when expanded.

No leaves accompany the fall colchicums. They come in early spring, are wide and glossy and often a foot long.

A succession of pointed buds will push through the soil from one bulb. Six of eight are not uncommon, spreading the flowering period over several weeks.

Although poplars are not yet flaming their candles, we almost expect to sight a preliminary vee of geese venturing south. Other birds are congregating, spreading the exciting news of migration.

Already too the travel ads are urging humans to plan their own migration, but first there are garden plans to fulfil.

Perhaps the plans involve changes to procure more leisure in the garden; to simplify complex plantings and lessen the amount of care.

If plants are to be moved, tag them now, at the same time decide where they are to go. Place a stake in the new location and another tag with the name of the plant to be moved there.

Moving almost any shrub (within limits as to size, perhaps) is more easily and successfully accomplished from about the middle of September onward than in spring.

The advent of cooler weather, the prospect of fall rains plus the warmth in the soil, these things add up to success in fall planting on the coast.

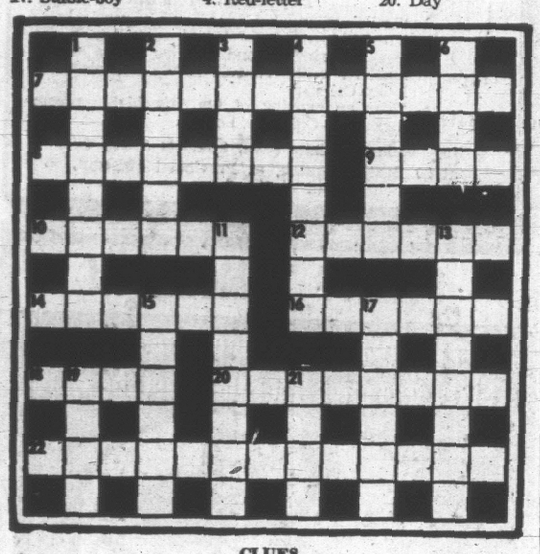

And perhaps this annual planting spree we enjoy in fall gratifies our urge for action, and makes us content to resist migration.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Car's Reverse Gear Was His Lifesaver

By BOB BOWMAN

An automobile trip from Halifax to Victoria should take about nine days, travelling at normal speeds. The highways are first-class all the way. So it is remarkable that Thomas Wilby made the same same trip in 1912 in two months, when there were few roads, let alone highways.

Wilby brought a late-model, high-riding car from Britain to Halifax, and dipped its wheels in the Atlantic on Aug 20, 1912, before leaving for Victoria. He had spare parts strapped on the top and sides, and his route was close to the present-day Trans-Canada highway.

He had a companion who acted as spare driver and pilot and one of their first problems came at Quebec City where the car was unable to get up the hill to Upper Town. Wilby was so embarrassed that he got out, and left his companion to turn the car around and then get up the hill in reverse.

In fact the roads were so bad in many places that a large part of the trans-continental trip was made in reverse. The section from Toronto to North Bay took two weeks and they only got through some places by using block and tackle to drag the car from tree to tree. They had to take the train from North Bay to Sudbury, and travelled by ship from Sault Ste. Marie to the Lakehead, and then by train to Winnipeg.

Strangely enough the trip through the Rockies wasn't as difficult as the Toronto-North Bay section although they had to go in reverse most of the time, or run the car on the railway lines.

Wilby kept a diary and made interesting observations about Canada. He said that the people of the Maritimes were rooted in the good earth and asked little of life except reasonable subsistence. On the other hand the people of the west, "will let neither mountain nor prairie sleep, who are alive with action, who cannot rest, who cannot wait."

When Wilby got to Victoria he emptied a can of Atlantic water into the Pacific.

Other Events on August 20:

1641—Maissonneuve arrived at Quebec on his way to found Montreal.

1691—Henry Kelsey was first white man to see present day Saskatchewan.

1720—Three ships brought 300 settlers to Island of St. John (P.E.I.)

1748—Francois Bigot became Intendant at Quebec.

1858—Vancouver Island became a British colony.

Fun with figures

BY E.A.H. HUNTER

We have 1358 for today's game. Using all four digits each time, one of each but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the ordinary plus sign) or factorial symbols, and powers.

For example, 35 + 8 — 1 is a solution for 42.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 90. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

Treatment Outlined For Sinus Problems

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Thousands of people want to know what to do for sinus trouble. I have had some experience treating it, because at one time I worked in a nose and throat clinic, and there saw many people with sinus trouble. For years, there were many nose and throat specialists who tried to cure chronic sinusitis by operating and cleaning out nearly all of the several sinuses, but they stopped doing this because the "cavern" that was made greatly distressed many of the patients.

There are two big antrums that are one under each cheek; there are two frontal sinuses under the forehead just aboye the nose and the inner edges of the eyebrows. There are two ethmoid sinuses back of the top of the nose; and there are two sphenoid sinuses that are far back on the top of the nose and under the brain. All these sinuses normally contain air, and were built in probably to make the skull less heavy. The sinuses are lined with a membrane which makes a rather liquid mucus—a mucus which normally drains into the nose.

In the cases of many people, when they have a cold, the inflammation goes into one or more of the sinuses, and makes an abnormal amount of secretion and eventually perhaps some pus. If this does not drain away quickly and easily, the person can get an ache or a pain in his face, in the region of the sinus that is inflamed.

When I was a boy, I had four severe colds a year, and commonly a cold used to go into my right antrum under my right cheek. Now that I rarely have a cold, if one comes, it still is inclined to go into that cavity and to cause it to ache. When the mucus or pus discharges into my nose, I get relief. I remember when I was a college student, I would get considerable pain in my antrum, because it could not easily discharge its contents into my nose. Then I would go to my dear professor and friend, a nose expert, and he would push a little tube into the antrum through a hole in the side of my nose, or he might push a trocar (a tube-like instrument) into the antrum; he would let out the pus and then I would be well.

During my boyhood in Hawaii, swimming every day in the ocean, I had no trouble with my sinuses, but later, when on this continent, I would swim in a tank, I would often, within 12 hours, get a violent sinusitis with fever. This happened so often that I had to stop swimming.

One of my sons also had trouble if he swam in a tank; he would get an inflammation of one of his frontal sinuses. What happens, as a result of the swimming, is that infected water gets into the sinuses and there produces infection. The water out in the ocean is likely to be clean and free of germs.

Some 30 years ago when I began taking two capsules of Dr. Harold Diehl's drug, "Copavin" (a mixture of codeine and papaverine), the minute I felt a cold coming, I put an end to my colds, and also to my old sinusitis.

Durin my years at the Mayo Clinic, I saw hundreds of people who came to have their sinusitis treated and cured. Practically always I found that what the patient was distressed about was the "post-nasal drip." He felt some material dripping down the back of his throat, and because he feared it was pus, that could poison him if he swallowed it, he kept constantly trying to cough it out.

I sent every one of these hundreds of people to the clinic's very able nose and throat men, and in almost every case the report came back to me saying, "This person hasn't enough sinusitis to talk about; he has no pus in his nose; what he has is some extra mucus, which is harmless. If he will believe my statement that the mucus is harmless, and will swallow it, and let it be digested in his stomach in a few minutes, like so much white of egg, he will be well."

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

The opening lead was taken by North's king of diamonds, after which the king and ace of trumps gathered in the adverse pieces.

As South viewed the situation, his contract was an excellent one. If West possessed either the ace or queen of clubs (a 75 per cent chance), then by making two club leads toward dummy, declarer would restrict his losers in this suit to two tricks. His only other loser would be a spade.

And so, at trick four, South led a low club and put up dummy's jack. Upon winning with his queen, East returned the spade ten. South taking with the king. Another club lead was then made, the board's king being taken by East's ace. When play had ended, South had lost three clubs and a spade. Where did he slip?

After drawing trumps, declarer should have cashed the ace of diamonds. The board's remaining diamond would then be ruffed, thus eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands.

Next would come the ace of spades, the king of spades, and a third spade, West winning the latter lead. Whatever West now played, declarer was home safely.

It West returned a spade (or, in theory, a diamond, if he had one), it would be ruffed in dummy as South discarded a losing club from his own hand. And if West played a club, which he would have), dummy's jack would be taken by East's queen.

East would now be a "dead duck." A club return would make a winner out of dummy's king, while either a diamond or a spade (in theory) return would enable South to discard a club as he ruffed the trick in dummy.

Quiet Defiance of German General Victory for Paris

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — France's long road back from the humiliation of early defeat in the Second World War reached its high point 25 years ago with the liberation of Paris.

And the quiet defiance by a German general of Adolf Hitler's passion for destruction ranks with a whirlwind display of political tactics by Charles de Gaulle among peak points in the August, 1944, drama.

Tiny, flower-decked memorials embedded in scores of walls still signify the points all over Paris where Resistance fighters met death in battling stubborn remnants of the capital's German garrison.

Still in evidence too are questions about whether Hitler really demanded, "Is Paris burning?" when told of Allied entry into the city he had ordered defended to the point of total destruction.

Through the swirl of conflict—within the liberators' own camp as well as between the Germans and their attackers—that left Paris free and unshattered, looms the figure of Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz, his record of campaign service in Russia and Italy contrasting with his background of occasional disregard for Hitler's orders.

The general, then 49, was promptly relieved of his post as an army corps commander but on Aug. 6 he was given charge of German forces in Greater Paris.

As late as Aug. 22, 1944, he found himself confronted with a radioed reiteration by Hitler of the order to leave Paris a heap of rubble in an all-out fight against the Allies.

But by that time, the capital was in virtual insurrection against its German occupiers, powerful Allied columns were within easy striking distance and the general decided against a useless bloodbath, despite the already evident collapse of a truce between his forces and the insurrectionists.

Also working to prevent a catastrophic clash was Raoul Nordling, Swedish consul-general in Paris, whose strong ties with the French capital combined with the wishes of his country's king to produce determined peace initiatives.

The French Resistance, itself split between Communist and non-Communist factions, had set off a round of labor strikes which shut down vital utilities in Paris.

Posters everywhere urged the population to join in a rising against the Germans, while that familiar hallmark of the Paris revolutionary spirit—barricades—sprouted on all sides.

●

Although moderate Resistance leaders—such as Gen. Jacques Chaban-Delmas, now France's prime minister—at first called for a more cautious policy, all the anti-Nazi groups finally joined in an Aug. 21 declaration of support for the insurrection.

Since April, 1944, Nazi commanders had been evacuating their forces from Paris.

But thousands of soldiers from the Reich, equipped with relatively sophisticated arms, remained and seemed well able to smash civilian rebels.

Among Allied armies outside Paris, Gen. Philippe Leclerc and his French armored division were itching to speed the remaining miles into the city, a dash which would make the capital's liberation the work of Frenchmen.

However, Leclerc's ideas clashed with those of American authorities in his area.

The Allied chief is said to have thought in terms of outflanking and surrounding Paris, and already American columns had bypassed the capital in their sweep eastwards through France.

●

Gen. de Gaulle, whose Algerian-based Fighting French group had declared itself June 3 the provisional government of the French republic, is quoted by one historian as attributing the delay in American moves on Paris to efforts by Washington aimed at finding a French leader other than himself for post-liberation France.

By Aug. 21, de Gaulle was pressing Eisenhower to unleash Leclerc's men against Paris.

The French leader's persuasion efforts were intensified by reports of increasingly bitter fighting between Germans and Resistance squads within the capital.

On Aug. 22 came Eisenhower's decision to send in the French troops, backed by Americans.

The first French soldiers entered Paris on the night of Aug. 24, greeted by the ringing of church bells and the delirious shouts of civilians.

But the main force did not arrive until the next morning, to find itself battling stubborn strongpoints of German defiance across the city.

Snipers played a leading role in the sometimes bitter battle, but so did Leclerc's tanks as they rushed around the metropolis in carefully planned assaults on centres of Nazi control.

Eager hands sought to be first in raising the French tricolor on such famous landmarks as the Eiffel Tower and the Arc de Triomphe.

In the early afternoon of Aug. 25, von Choltitz—satisfied that his military honor had been vindicated—gave himself up to French representatives following fierce fighting around his headquarters on the Seine's right bank.

Then came the ceremony of his surrender to Leclerc, undertaken despite the absence of any American representative.

Later that afternoon, de Gaulle arrived in Paris from Rambouillet, to the southwest, and swiftly set about establishing the authority of his provisional government as against any claims to political power made by Resistance leaders who had been active inside France.

●

Georges Bidault, a top Resistance figure who was later to become premier, urged that de Gaulle proclaim the republic's renewal following four years of Nazi occupation and the Vichy government of Marshal Philippe Petain.

"No," replied de Gaulle. "The republic has never ceased to exist."

It had been embodied, he argued, in his Free French and Fighting French organizations and in the provisional government led by himself.

Aug. 26 brought de Gaulle his greatest moments of glory, including the famous procession down the Champs-Elysees.

Yet even in planning this parade of triumph, the general's sense of political tactics was busily at work.

No Resistance men were invited to accompany him down the avenue, though Bidault did manage to join the march.

And in retrospect, the victorious de Gaulle considered the admiring roars of the Paris masses a form of referendum confirming his right to govern liberated France.

●

The afternoon ended with a service of thanksgiving in Notre Dame Cathedral, punctuated by what seemed to be gunfire in or around the historic church.

This de Gaulle blamed on, among others, over-excited Resistance men—the very type of activist he was determined to keep from controlling France.

His request that Leclerc's division stay in Paris for the victory parade had angered an American general anxious to have French help in clearing Germans from the capital's northeast suburbs.

But de Gaulle's further desire to keep the troops after the procession was over was rooted in practicality rather than reasons of prestige—Paris being still menaced by potential disorder.

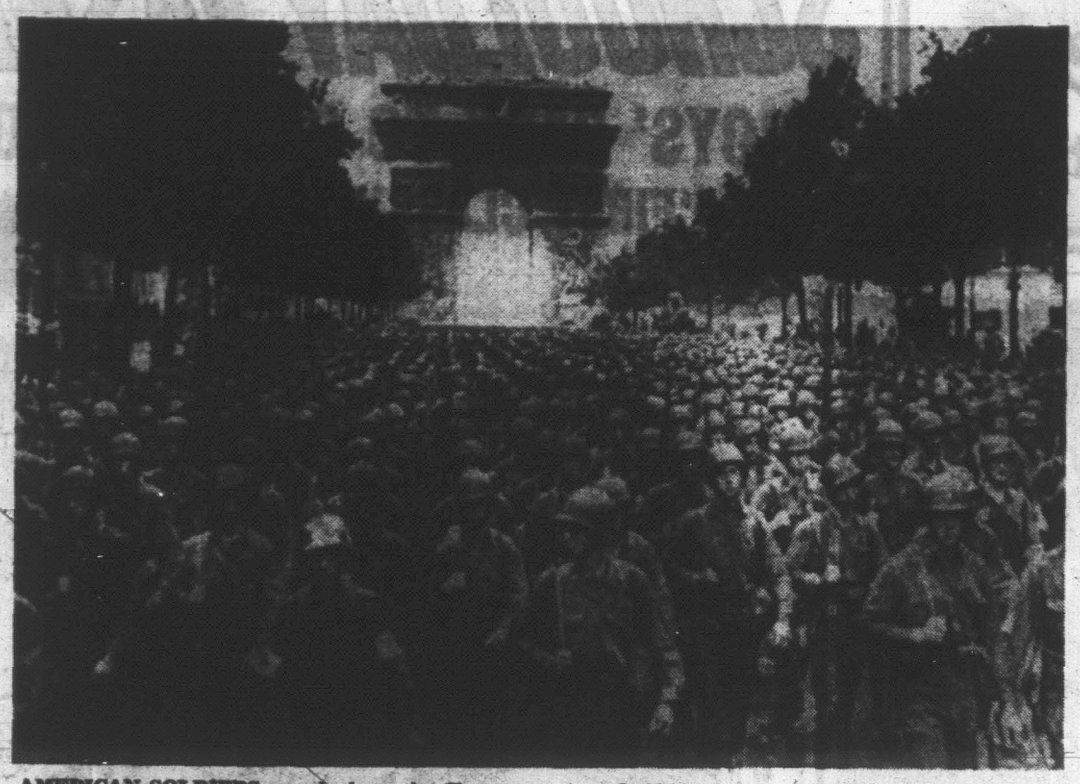

A determination to impress Resistance elements with his strength explained his request that Eisenhower organize a subsequent parade of American forces through Paris, the Allied commander wrote later.

The march, duly undertaken, was meant to be "a show of force and to establish his position firmly," said Eisenhower in describing de Gaulle's intentions.

Von Choltitz, despite a minor heart seizure Aug. 25, 1944, lived until 1968, but 2,788 of his fellow Germans died defending their Paris positions while more than 1,600 Frenchmen—Resistance fighters, civilians and soldiers — met death in the liberation battle.

After Eisenhower's death this year, de Gaulle, though himself 78 and nearing the end of his presidency of France, flew to funeral ceremonies in Washington in what was taken to be a final gesture of gratitude for wartime support.

Tough Masculine Singing Style Puts Females Atop Pop Charts

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Her love songs are tough, not tender. She comes on in mannish clothes—boots, leather vests, pants. She belts out the words, a sexy snarl in her voice.

She is the new American chanteuse and she looks about as gentle as a lion tamer.

Whether the girl is Nancy Sinatra, Ann-Margret, Grace Slick or newcomer Jeannie C. Riley, the elements of style are there. She threatens men, wields her microphone like a gun and sometimes, like Janis Joplin, takes a swig of liquor right on stage.

It's a style that has been dubbed tough, masculine, aggressive and emancipated. The audiences—including men—love it. The style is credited with resurrecting women singers from years of oblivion in the sale of records.

The tough girls are riding high on the charts, and fans flock to see them in concert. Their look is copied in fashions, and teen-age girls across the country grow tresses as long as Nancy Sinatra's.

But isn't this all a put-on?

TRENDS CHANGE

Some of the singers say yes, that under the chain belts and leather they're really softies. Others deny it, claiming they reflect a new feminine breed—the invulnerable woman.

"There was a trend toward masculine actresses in films," says Nancy Sinatra. "Then there was a trend toward femininity. . . . Now we're back to the masculine trend."

Nancy, acclaimed as mama of the movement, hit a musical bonanza with her recording of Boots.

The record sold millions and Frank Sinatra's eldest daughter was a star. She had been trying for five years, curly-haired and singing softly. She was a flop.

Of her tough-girl image she says: "That's not the real me. But I went along with it because I wanted to be successful, and I wasn't getting anywhere with that sweet-little-girl voice."

"Lee told me, 'There's a floozy in you somewhere. You should sing like a 16-year-old girl who goes with 40-year-old men,'" she recalls. Then he wrote Boots and gave it to Nancy to record.

CASTS FALSE LIGHT

Petite, soft-spoken Nancy sighs: "It's funny, but I've made it for the exact opposite of what I believe in; I had to be something else to get what I have."

At least one girl singer says she and her image are the same. Grace Slick, 29, vocalist of the rock group the Jefferson Airplane, says:

"I wouldn't call the image tough. It's more definite. A woman who is performing and doing her own thing will be more aggressive, more masculine. Women working on their own have to be able to take care of themselves."

As a performer, Grace has been labelled sassy, bohemian, a "hard chick." She admits to being a rebel against her middle-class upbringing—rootless, willing to try anything new.

Renegades Plan Slayings

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland police say they believe renegade Black Nationalists have marked several leaders of the city's black community for assassination.

Police developed the theory Tuesday after discovering the body of Roger Harson, a 20-year-old lieutenant in the Black Nationalist Mau Mau sect.

It was the fourth shooting within two weeks involving leaders of black organizations. Three incidents were aimed at Pride, Inc.

Police said they believe black renegades are opposed to Pride, Operation Black Unity and Negroes sympathetic to their causes.

Bodies Found

VICTORIA, Brazil (Reuters)—Police here have discovered two more charred corpses, believed victims of Brazil's notorious "Death Squad," some way from the beach where 11 bodies were found last week. The "Death Squad" is believed to be a group of policemen which has summarily executed more than 1,000 petty criminals in the last three years.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A young lion named Jerry forgot the script Monday and bit Jules Jacot as the 79-year-old trainer put his head in the animal's mouth. But Jacot, a veteran of the St. Louis zoo's big cat show, didn't lose his head. He forced Jerry's jaws open and went on with the show, blood streaming from three head wounds.

Softer Line By CUS

OTTAWA (CP) — A somewhat softer line may flow from this year's convention of the Canadian Union of Students, now battling the gravest membership crisis in its 43-year history.

The enrolment crisis, which threatens to destroy the organization, will head the agenda when delegates meet at Lakehead University Aug. 27 for a week-long session.

Unless CUS can increase its total enrolment to about 120,000 students from the present 80,000 it will collapse before the end of the year, CUS President Martin Loney said Tuesday in an interview.

Referendums on membership are pending at most major Canadian universities outside Quebec and their outcome will determine the future of CUS, Mr. Loney said.

LESS RADICAL

The pitch to convention delegates—CUS believes they will strongly influence voting in their universities—will be low-key and less radical than at last year's convention in Guelph, Ont.

At that time, CUS endorsed the activities of the Vietnamese National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, raising a storm of controversy among academics and the public generally.

International issues will not be discussed this year. Instead, the convention will focus on issues which affect all students and on which there is likely to be general agreement, Mr. Loney said.

He blamed increasing "polarity" in universities for the troubles of CUS.

Small groups take either extreme right- or left-wing positions in the universities and the majority of students "in the middle" follow one or the other indiscriminately, he said.

Leftist groups were usually "the activists" and in the forefront of student protests. They were also the ones elected to student councils and, in turn, represented their universities in CUS.

FREIGHTENS THEM

This contributes to the image of CUS as a radical leftist movement of protesting students and "frightens away" less-extreme groups, causing them to vote against membership.

Mr. Loney, a graduate student at the University of Victoria, said these items will likely be discussed:

—Greater student representation on university governing bodies.

Primate Now Pastor At Large

SUDBURY (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada departed from episcopal tradition Tuesday by re-defining the role of its primate as a pastor for the church at large, without his own diocese.

The synod approved without change proposals of a commission set up two years ago to study the office of the primacy.

The bishops last October examined the proposals and passed a resolution asking that the bishops of Ontario try to provide a small diocese or collegiate church within that province as a fixed see for the primate.

But Very Rev. F. F. Nock, Dean of Algoma, told that synod that resolution was not acted upon because it would take things back on the old road of a fixed primatial see.

Under the new canon, the primate will have a pastoral relationship to the whole Canadian church and may speak in its name after consultation with the national executive council or the general synod. He will operate from national headquarters, which now are in Toronto. He will hold office until he retires or reaches the age of 70.

Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, the present primate, now is 66. He is Archbishop of Rupert's Land, which covers Manitoba, and Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Rupert's Land, which consists of the Prairie provinces and Northwest Territories.

The primate said later the passage of the motion was a relief. He said no date has been set for him to give up his responsibilities as Archbishop of Rupert's Land.

'Wait and See'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Liberal party refrained Tuesday from presenting a motion of non-confidence because the fledgling New Democratic Party administration of Manitoba deserves a chance, Liberal leader Gordon Johnston told the legislature.

. . . MOON: FREE AND EASY

Loss of balance was rather easy to detect, and after some practice the recovery became quite natural. My recommendation to future crews would be to set aside the first 15 or 20 minutes of their extra-vehicular activity just to work out, in their own individual ways, the best method of moving and to establish for themselves a confidence level of motion.

Our best simulations on Earth, the water tank and the one-sixth G aircraft, are both somewhat misleading. The resistive forces in water are too high to permit any rapid movement, and the experiences in the aircraft are too brief. Trying to remember back to simulations might lead to as many wrong conclusions as right ones on the moon.

One very interesting thing was that the horizontal reference there is not at all well defined. That is, it's difficult to know when you are leaning forward or backward and to what degree. This fact, coupled with the rather limited field of vision from our helmets, made local features on the moon appear to change slope depending on which way you were looking and how you were standing.

The back pack, the life support system, weighs just over 20 pounds on the lunar surface (on Earth it weighs 124 pounds), but even that weight tends to pull you backward and you must consciously lean forward just a little to compensate for it. I believe someone has described the posture as "tired ape"; almost erect but slumped forward a little. It actually was difficult sometimes to know when you were standing erect. I found that determining my position, establishing the centre of my own gravity, required leaning from one side to the other to test it.

It feels as if you can lean farther in any direction, without losing your balance, than you can on Earth. Neither of us ever fell during our activities. We felt that it would be fairly easy to get down to our knees and then get up again.

It was also quite possible to lean over, with just a small amount of support. We dropped one film pack from a camera and fortunately it dropped in close vicinity of the bottom of the ladder, near a footpad. Neil was able to support himself quite easily with one hand on the landing gear strut and lean down and pick it up.

The traction under our feet, and recovery from imbalance, actually was inferior to that we had simulated in the one-sixth gravity aircraft. The surface on the cushined rubber floor of the airplane was quite stable and traction was easy. On the moon it was less easy.

The depth to which our feet penetrated in this odd, powdery-looking surface varied considerably. In many places we sank only a fraction of an inch, but the rims of some small depression craters seemed to have a deeper soft layer. Our boots actually went in three or four inches. This created a tendency for slipping sideways when the boot finally hit something hard, and we tried to move around as much as possible on level areas, avoiding the little depressions.

We didn't have any huge craters or boulders, but there were rocks of all shapes and sizes, and apparently of many different compositions.

We had talked jokingly before the flight about the various colors the moon might have, and I searched around and found that no one had suggested even in the remotest way that anything would look purple. So I said "there's going to be purple up there I tell you." Therefore I was quite alert to anything which might have a purple color and I did spot something in some of the background material which appeared to have this shade. However, I don't in fact think that any rock actually had a distinctive purple color.

Never at any time did Neil Armstrong and I find working there fatiguing; we never felt the need to stop and rest.

Naturally we wanted to understand fully the effort required to get back up the ladder into the LM (lunar module). So before we commited ourselves to lunar work I practiced that slight jump up the last long step.

I was a little hesitant at first to apply a lot of force but after a couple of tries I found that it was in fact quite easy. Near the end it was easy to apply enough force to go several steps up the ladder with one jump.

Technically, the most difficult task I performed on the surface was driving those core samplers into the ground, to get little tubes of lunar material for study. For such a soft, powdery surface, there is significant and surprising resistance just a few inches down.

In no way did this suggest a hard force like a buried rock. It was just a gradual hardening of the sub-surface which developed about five or six inches down.

Now another surprising thing is that this resistance is not accompanied by a strong supporting force on the sides. I would meet resistance trying to push the core sampler down into the ground, into the sub-surface, but that same material would not support the tube on the sides. It kept tipping back and forth from one side to another. Neil and I noticed the same thing when we tried to put the flagstaff in.

Some of the other lunar tools worked better up there than they did on Earth. The tongs with which we picked up rocks, for example. In Earth gravity sometimes the weight of the rock would make it fall out of the tongs. This did not occur on the moon.

Digging a trench, on the other hand, was much more difficult there. In that gravity you don't have much weight with which you can bear down on anything, and you don't want to apply all your weight because you need to reserve some of it to retain your balance.

●

Scooping out a trench on the moon is going to require many more applications of the trenching tool that would be necessary on Earth.

It was a unique, almost mystical environment up there.

Neil and I are both fairly reticent people, and we don't go in for free exchanges of sentiment. Even during our long training we didn't have many free exchanges.

In contrast to that there was a moment on the moon, a brief moment, in which we sort of looked at each other and slapped each other on the shoulder — that was about the only space available — and said "We made it. Good show." Or something like that.

I don't believe any pair of people have every been more removed physically from the rest of the word than we were, nor at the same time so closely bound to it by all the people back here who maintained liaison with us and who were so closely involved in helping us get there and back.

Before the flight Neil and I had discussed the timing of our EVA (extra-vehicular activity), and we had the option — with ground concurrence — of doing it either after a brief sleep period, or before.

We agreed that splitting up a sleep period was not the most attractive way to program ourselves, and going out early meant a long period without rest. Since we were not tired at that point, we decided to sleep after our EVA.

Our success in that was less than optimum. In a word, we slept badly.

I had the more advantageous location, on the floor of the LM. Neil worked out a position leaning back against the aft part of the cabin, essentially lying on the ascent engine cover. In order to keep his feet up, he rigged up a strap around a vertical bar so it formed a hammock for his feet.

Then he found that the Earth was peering at him through the telescope. The telescope was in such a position that it had the Earth in its field of view and it in turn was in Neil's field of view and it was like a big blue eyeball staring at him.

The thing which really kept us awake, however, was the temperature. It was very chilly in there; after about three hours it became unbearable.

We had the liquid cooling system in operation in our suits, of course, and we tried to get comfortable by turning the water circulation down to minimum. That didn't help much.

We turned the temperature control on our oxygen system down to minimum. That didn't have much effect either. We could have raised the window shades and let the light in, to warm us, but that would have destroyed any remaining possibility of sleeping.

As we deployed our experiments on the surface we had to jettison things like lanyards, retaining fasteners, etc., and some of these we tossed away. The objects would go away with a very, very lazy motion, a slow motion.

If anyone tried to throw a baseball back and forth in that atmosphere he would have difficulty at first acclimatizing himself to that slow, lazy trajectory, but I believe he could adapt to it quite readily.

It was surprising to me how much at home I felt in Eagle.

I had really been looking forward to all this, and from the moment I first crawled in there to check the systems I felt that "I've been here before; I've done this before."

What I feel is a strong tribute to all the simulations we have, the high degree of fidelity of our trainers. The view of the moon from the surface, and the EVA itself, have much less reality to me now than have those familiar operations inside Eagle. When we looked out the windows for the first time it just looked comfortable. As if you could almost go out in your shirtsleeves and get a sun tan out there.

I remember thinking "Gee, if I didn't know where I was, I could believe that somebody had created this environment somewhere out in the West and given us another simulation to work in."

To look up and see that very brilliant, colorful Earth lacked a little reality, too. We could see the Earth through the telescope but we never saw Mike (Collins) in Columbia as he went around over our heads. We could hear him, and his voice was one of the most stabilizing and comforting things of all. There was our buddy up there, close at hand.

The actual descent to the surface was one of the smoothest rides I've ever had. The suspension system was so good we couldn't even detect the engine thrust level. When the engine ignited we couldn't tell it was burning, except from the computer displays and the instruments.

When it throttled up to 100 per cent to really slow us down, of course, we felt a significant force application. We had good indications that we were going to be a little bit long because a well-defined crater, Maskelyn W, came by about two seconds late. That indicated that if you applied that two seconds up to where engine ignition takes place, where the velocity is on the order of a mile per second, we would tend to be about two miles long.

Touchdown was far smoother than I had hoped for, just the slightest hint of one pad touching an instant before the others. This impact travelled from the floor to the feet up to the body. There was no doubt that we were on the surface. If we weren't we were in deep trouble!

The ascent was as smooth as the descent. We expected some oscillations, and we had spent some time in a trainer which simulated this launch. In that dynamic simulator we would really shake, rattle, and roll, but the actual ride was so smooth we felt as if we were just lazily, gradually wallowing back and forth.

It is difficult for me now to articulate my thoughts about the significance of this flight. On the surface, it was three people on a voyage, but it was much more than that. It was more than a team of people and government and industry working together.

Man was destined to land on the moon sooner or later. The challenge has been there ever since man first looked at the moon, and it was inevitable that he would accept the challenge. The symbolism of the flight . . . of what we were looking for, of what I was interested in . . . seemed to transcend modern times.

I asked people to offer, thanks in their own way, and it is my hope that people will keep this whole event in their minds and see beyond minor details and technical achievements to a deeper meaning behind it all — a challenge, a quest, the human needs to do these things, and the need to recognize that we are all one mankind, under God.

Bennett Summons Businessmen To Fight 'Socialist Spectre'

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Reporter

VANCOUVER — Premier Bennett called 56 high-level businessmen to a secret meeting in a plush downtown restaurant a week ago and told them the Social Credit Party was in trouble.

As he was asking them to help raise a reported $600,000 in urgently needed campaign funds to fight the "spectre of socialism" a mimeograph machine quickly churned out NDP campaign literature in a dank Granville Street basement four blocks away.

On the wall beside the machine was a hand-written note that said:

"Please Save All Paper for Test Runs: Both Sides Should be Used Before Discarding."

ISN'T YET KNOWN

It isn't yet known how successful Bennett's frantic, big-money appeal has been, but the sign is still there beside the NDP duplicating machine as it churns quietly on toward Aug. 27.

"Panic" is one word to describe what the premier

Big Money Flows To Socreds

But more acceptable word to businessmen who sympathize with the premier is "concern" — concern over the prospect of the NDP forming the next government.

One man was so concerned that he wrote out a sizable cheque for the Socreds on the spot.

OMINOUS COINCIDENCE

The holding of the meeting in the teeming, polyglot Vancouver Centre riding was an apparent coincidence, but an ominous one.

The NDP is waging one of its toughest door-to-door campaigns in an attempt to defeat Herb Capozzi and Evan Wolfe, two of the younger stronger Socred backbenchers in the last legislature.

Tension is mounting in the Vancouver Centre contest because it appears that a perhaps unprecedented number of voters are waiting until the last moment to make their decisions.

According to Brian Fogarty, campaign manager for the underdog Liberals in the riding, the Socreds and NDP are each spending money in bundles.

KIND OF VALUE

But the economy-minded note beside the NDP duplicating machine indicates the kind of value the party hopes to get for its money.

The big difference between the two parties is in the prodigious amount of newspaper, radio and television advertising being done for all Socred candidates by the provincial party.

Allan Williams, Liberal MLA for West Vancouver-Howe Sound in the last legislature, estimates the Socreds have already spent $500,000-$750,000 provincially on advertising.

He got the figure from an independent advertising agency which he asked to put a price tag on the campaign.

Williams said it isn't clear whether Bennett needs more money to pay for even more advertising than originally planned or to cover debts previously piled up.

Several large newspaper advertisements on behalf of the Socreds have been placed since the Tuesday night meeting.

A CONCERNED GROUP

One of them from the "British Columbians for Bennett" committee claims to be paid for by a concerned group of citizens containing ex-supporters of the Liberal, NDP and Conservative parties.

M. J. O'Brien, the advertising man who handles the rich B.C. Telephone Co. account, has denied that telephone company president Ernie Richardson had any advance knowledge of anti-NDP advertisements placed by the advertising agency.

Some Socred opponents have claimed the advertisements represented the telephone company's feelings about a proposed NDP takeover of its assets.

The secret meeting was attended by "56 frightened men," Williams said.

But he isn't sure what caused the greater fright — fear of an NDP government or fear of the consequences of not rallying to the aid of a government party which has powerful controls over the business world.

SUPPORTS HIS CASE

Williams said the meeting helps support his case for "open book financing" of election campaigns.

He has a special interest in the meeting because his wealthy constituency was one of two named by Bennett as vital to the government side if free enterprise is to survive in B.C.

The other was Vancouver-Point Grey, another urban rich riding, won in 1966 by Liberal leader Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom.

Within hours of the secret meeting, at least two "action" committees sprang out of board-room woodwork on the premier's behalf.

URGENT APPEAL

One prominent Vancouver investment firm received an urgent appeal for a donation, but its directors could not agree on whether to give the money, largely through the

More Than $500,000 Already Spent

The decision was finally left to the company president and it is not known how, or whether, he decided.

Williams says he knows of at least one man publicly named as a member of a Bennett businessmen's committee, who privately supports him in his bid for re-election in West Vancouver-Howe Sound.

This indicates the pressure under which businessmen are put by a premier who pushed the panic button, he said.

The 56 who went to dinner with Bennett were sent invitations which indicated the gathering was to be non-political, Williams said.

Williams, who doesn't believe the NDP have a strong chance to win the election, said Bennett's desperation tactics are further proof that "his fear campaign is being pushed and pushed hard."

He said it is disturbing that some highly intelligent business people have apparently been swayed by the premier.

But as far as he could tell from his own riding, the majority of voters appear to be staying with the Liberal Party as the only alternative to what he sees as a crumbling Socred Party.

"Only Bill Clancey could say that," he added, referring to the role of the long-time Bennett confidante in arranging the meeting.

NO STRONG CHANCE

FEW DOGS HAVE NOSE FOR MARIJUANA RAID

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina drug agents are running into problems with a plan to use a new way of hounding marijuana pushers: They can't find a dog with a sensitive enough nose.

"The dog problem is greater than I'd imagined it would be," said Charles Dunn, executive director of the State Bureau of Investigation, in an interview Monday.

The SBI has been working since last spring to train two puppies—to work with a new 10-man drug squad due to go into operation in September.

First, a German shepherd was put into training.

Dunn said the dog, originally trained for the military, flunked out when the new training "overloaded her senses."

Another dog was put into training and reached "90-percent effectiveness," Dunn said, but then became ill and had to be admitted to hospital indefinitely.

"So we're sort of in between dogs right now," Dunn said. He said he hopes to find other dogs to train and have two ready for use in two or three months.

Dunn figures the dogs will cost about $150 each to purchase and require about $200 a year in upkeep.

TOWN CENTRE— SPARE LOT . LIVING QUARTERS—STORE FRONT
WEEKEND CARPENTERS AND RETAILERS

Victoria may be the capital but Sidney is the place to go. This town is jumping and property values are surging up. The building is huge and opposite the new shopping centre. There is a store front, 25x45', newly refaced with Tudor effect. Behind is a 3-bedroom—1200 sq. ft. living quarters with large kitchen and living room. In the rear is a huge warehouse 30'x33' of 2 storeys. The lot is 47'x100' and the spare lot is 25'x100'. You can build a nice cement block building on the spare lot. The owner will pay $150 per month to rent back the store. The easy part of the deal is that the owner will accept a 4-bedroom house in town as exchange for his equity of about $35,000 or he will accept only $15,000 down with an agreement for sale back at $300 per month. Doggy Tally Controversial But Valid

SAN FERNANDO, Chile (AP)—A dog scored a soccer goal for his owner's team and the referee ruled it "controversial but valid."

The decision caused an uproar among the spectators and long arguments on the field but no violence.

Gaglardi Wants Highways Job Back

By JOHN MIKA
Times Reporter

KAMLOOPS — Ex-highways minister P. A. Gaglardi Tuesday indicated he would like his old portfolio back.

But he told reporters it's up to the premier to decide if that would "disrupt" the cabinet.

He was commenting on Premier Bennett's announcement the previous night that he would be given a portfolio again if re-elected and Social Credit is returned to power.

Gaglardi said the portfolio's choice is up to the premier "but naturally the job I think I know the best is the one I was doing."

Gaglardi said Bennett's announcement was no surprise to him.

"I have known this all the time. He told me that eight months ago.

"He never wanted me to get out in the first place. That is why he begged me to stay in (the cabinet)."

Gaglardi said he resigned his highways portfolio under fire in the 1968 session "because I thought the best thing I could do for the government was to step out.

"But that was a mistake.

"I never did anything I should step out for. I was sick and there was a stupid bunch of foolishness about me.

NOTHING TO IT

"There was nothing to it but to some of the government people, there was."

Asked why Bennett took so long to announce his plan to reinstate him, Gaglardi replied:

"You have to realize he has other ministers and just can't disrupt them

Black Panther Co-Founder Arrested for East Murder

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — FBI agents arrested Bobby Seale, national chairman of the Black Panther party, Tuesday night on a fugitive warrant charging flight from a murder charge in the torture killing of a former Black Panther in New Haven, Conn.

Seale, 32, was surrounded and taken into custody without resistance as he rode in an automobile with other members of the militant Negro organization in the nearby university city of Berkeley.

Charles Bates, FBI agent in charge for the San Francisco area, said Seale is charged in Connecticut with murder and kidnapping in the death of Alex Rackley of New York, a former party member whose burned and mutilated body was found in a shallow river 20 miles from New Haven last May.

Rackley died May 21, shortly after the arrest in New York of 21 Panthers in what police said was a plot to blow up buildings. His death followed a "kangaroo court" trial, New Haven police said, in which he was believed to have been accused of disloyalty to the party.

FBI agents brought Seale to San Francisco County jail pending an arraignment before U.S. Commissioner Richard Goldsmith.

In New Haven, Police Chief James Ahern said a Superior Court warrant issued Tuesday also charges Seale with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit kidnapping.

Fourteen other persons have been arrested in connection with the Rackley slaying.

The Panther party was founded by Seale and Huey Newton, who now is serving a term for manslaughter in the killing of an Oakland policeman.

Seale is on three years' probation for carrying a gun.

He was an unsuccessful candidate last fall for the California Assembly, whose legislative chambers in Sacramento he and other Panthers invaded with rifles in a 1967 demonstration against a gun control bill. Seale also was placed on three year's probation for that incident.

RYE, GIN, RUM JOIN BAN ON SEX

VANCOUVER (CP) — SEX has been banned from British Columbia's highways.

So have RYE, GIN, RUM and ALE.

And there will be no PIGS, RATS or COWS driving around.

All have been eliminated by the province's motor vehicles branch from use on licence plates under the three-letter, three-number system, to be introduced in 1970.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Monday offensive letter combinations are being screened by the branch, which has been in touch with provinces and states in the United States using the letters system.

"To start with we will use only the letters A to K, excluding I because of its similarity to the number one," Mr. Peterson said.

BUSINESS PLANNERS . . .

'think tomorrow!'

Whether a business is still in the planning stages or is now in full operation, its end purpose is to make profits. Its main concern is to increase sales and build clientele. In order to do this, the wise business planner looks for the most powerful, authoritative and far-reaching form of promotion to carry his sales message to the greatest number of potential customers.

Build Prestige and Promote Public Relations by Placing Your Confidence in this Community's Own Daily Newspapers to Carry Your Message into Virtually Every Home* in the Greater Victoria Area.

* Of the total circulation of 71,000, over 61,000 copies of Victoria's daily newspapers are purchased each day in the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Area (DBS).

In planning an effective advertising budget, nothing is left to chance. The shrewd planner wants the satisfaction of knowing exactly what he will get for his advertising dollar. Thus the local daily paper gets top preference of all media. Exact circulation figures are placed before the client with a report of circulation growth from year to year. (Victoria's daily papers have shown an increase of 20.8% over the last 5 years. Audit Bureau of Circulation Report for period ending Sept. 30, 1968.)

In addition, the client knows that the local daily newspaper is "built in" to the community way of life, having shared in its growth over the years as a very much alive community member. His good judgment tells him it is a sound and profit-getting form of advertising for his firm.

Your Most Powerful Promotional Medium is the one that is WELCOMED DAILY into the Homes of Your Potential Customers—

450 ATTEND CANDIDATES' RALLY

Lack of Pollution Enforcement Charged

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN—Th Social Credit government is not enforcing its pollution laws, three candidates charged at an all-candidates rally attended by 450 persons Tuesday night.

Liberal Jim Bigsby took first swing at the pollution issue by saying Premier Bennett had not lived up to earlier byelection pitches for "clean air and clean water".

He suggested establishment of an independent pollution control department not subject to industry pressure.

New Democrat Robert Strachan said pollution control must be reorganized since the health minister could not enforce what was under the control of the minister of lands and forests.

Independent Kenneth Hasanen said he agreed that pollution control should be independent and he was the independent who would guarantee it.

'TEST OF COURAGE'

Ennals said he was tired of hearing that nothing was being done about pollution and quoted from a Vancouver Sun article quoting federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davies at stating B.C. pulp mills were among the best controlled in the world.

When Bigsby said the election was a test of courage and the premier was trying to "herd the voters before him like sheep," Strachan said every election in Cowichan-Malahat in 17 years had been "a test of courage."

"Cabinet ministers and premiers have alwasy threatened us. But the voters have never bowed because of coercion, intimidation or fear."

He was roundly applauded when he thanked Ennals for referring to him in campaign advertisements as an elder statesman. "A politician thinks of the next election but a statesman thinks of the next generation," Strachan said. "And this government has let the next generation down badly."

The promises then came thick and fast but Strachan stuck with the theme that election issues were the same all over the province. He did say that Bill 86 that arose out of the Chant report on education would be changed under a New Democratic Party administration.

Ennals advocated that 19-year-olds be allowed to drink legally and liquor be allowed with meals on Sunday. He was certain the royal commission study into B.C. liquor laws would recommend the changes.

Hasanen, who drew many laughs and applause with his semi-serious and intellectual approach said the NDP, Socreds and Liberals were all trying to solve the results of their earlier solutions.

He said partisan politics had failed because politicians were self-oriented, lazy and provided poor leadership.

He said voters had seen lack of action in Cowichan-Malahat with an NDP representative and a Social Credit government. "Now what will happen if you elect a Social Credit MLA and get an NDP government?"

ALL-NIGHT FERRIES

Hasanen said the obvious solution was to elect an independent so both parties would have to "scramble" to try to woo the constituency back and then "you'll get the best of everything."

He suggested all-night ferries from Vancouver; a teen town representative on municipal and provincial governments; Nitinat Lake brought into Cowichan-Malahat Jurisdiction before "industry gets it;" a moratorium on party politics; and increased responsibility of big industry to the public.

"A few cheap scholarships and the water wheel at Chemainus are not enough for the millions taken out of this area."

Bigsby said the government should include moving costs in expropriation cases and return of legal fees if the expropriated appealed the results. He was for more use of school premises to creatively chanel increasing youth leisure time, which is being misdirected into crime.

NOT RECOMMENDED for double chins. Mrs. Donna Casler, a practical nursing student from Nanaimo Vocational School, now working at the Cowichan District Hospital, demonstrates new Hausted traction-aid. The $800 device for chronic back disorders, is the only one of its type in use in Vancouver Island hospitals. It was purchased for Cowichan hospital's physiotherapy ward by the proceeds from the senior and junior auxiliaries' gift shop. (Ed Gould photo.)

Mayne Wants Catwalk

By DERYK THOMPSON

MAYNE ISLAND — Pollution control and what a new government would do for it is the main issue among Mayne Islanders in the provincial election campaign.

Most of the voting population of the island, about 100, made this clear during the question period at a lively all-candidates meeting in the community hall Tuesday night.

Vying for their votes were John Tisdalle, Saanich and the Island, Social Credit member in the last legislature, and challengers Louis Lindholm, Liberal, and Don Johannessen, New Democrat.

'LICENSING POLLUTION'

On pollution, Lindholm said a government formed by his party would fire the head of the Pollution Control Board.

"He's been licensing pollution, not stopping it," he said.

He said in some areas it was not financially possible for the community to solve the problem themselves.

But, he added, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark "has made himself look almost ridiculous because of what he insists about boats polluting the water."

"I'm surprised to hear Tisdalle say Loffmark is ridiculous," said Johannessen, "I've know this for some time."

'ELIND EYE'

Lindholm said "here's a government who turns a blind eye to pulp mills and their concern now is about what pleasure boat owners do."

If audience reaction is any indication Tisdalle didn't gain any votes in this reported NDP stronghold, but Liberal Lindholm showed he is a strong contender.

Laughter and the first strong applause of the evening followed his statement implying New Democrats don't have their hearts where their mouths are.

"The people steeped in socialism have tonight rejected it," he said.

PROFIT SHARING

He said this following Johannessen's response to a man who asked all the candidates how employees could share more in the profits.

The NDP schoolteacher suggested co-operatives be formed, profit-sharing encouraged or employees given an opportunity to buy shares in the company.

A question which brought enthusiastic response from the Islanders was voiced by one man who asked the candidates "what are you going to do for Mayne Island? All we need is a little catwalk and supervision for the ferry dock."

Johannessen said he had toured all the Gulf Islands and was "not very happy with the docking facilities on all of them."

"The provincial government should build a catwalk," he said.

Lindholm also promised to build one.

'LOT OF VANDALISM'

Tisdalle said he "supposed" it could be done but suggested weaknessess in the present wharf had been caused by "a lot of vandalism."

Johannessen suggested that under an NDP government and a new minister of municipal affairs the Gulf Islands would be made into a regional district.

"The Gulf Islands are unique. They don't fit in with the Saanich peninsula or anywhere else."

Kenneth Goodman of Coquitlam received head injuries when he was hit by a truck driven by Wayne Yacobishi of Port Alberni.

Goodman's companion, Scott Bodaly, 17, also of Coquitlam, also received head injuries and was taken to hospital in Nanaimo. His condition is satisfactory.

Island Woman Wins $500

MONTREAL (CP) — Gordon Rathburn of Millidgeville, N.B., seems to be the exception in being lucky in both love and money.

On Sunday he won the $10,000 third prize in Montreal's monthly voluntary tax draw, and today he is to be married.

The first prize of $100,000 went to Gerald Levac, a 24-year-old suburban Lachine bachelor who works for the federal agriculture department as a meat inspector.

Winners of $1,000 from outside Quebec were Mrs. Srella Jiricka of Saskatoon and F. C. Fraser of North Surrey, B.C.

Bonanza Days Called Best Yet

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife said Monday the week-long Bonanza Daze was better this year than ever and hoped it would remain an annual event.

Quaife upheld the honor of the city by winning the mayor's archery contest with a score of 40 points after a duel with North Cowichan Alderman John Cannon. Cannon led after the second round but finished with 37.

Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo and Mayor Skip MacDonald of Campbell River also participated but were no match for the local bowmen.

Winners were Michael Cronin, 5 months; Sheri-Ann Ayres, 9 months; Danny Robertson, 13 months; Bruce Jones, 20 months.

Victim Wasn't Authorized

PORT ALBERNI — A coroner's jury Monday returned a verdict of accidental death at an inquest for a Victoria logger killed in an Aug. 1 logging accident.

Maurice Morrio, 24, of 103 Pine, died almost instantly when a tracter he was driving turned over and crushed him.

Witnesses testified that Morino had been operating a heavy construction logging tractor without permission.

The trouble started when the tractor started down hill. It speeded up and Morino lost control of the vehicle which flipped and crushed him, according to witnesses.

Anguilla Changes Tune On Breaking Old Ties

By MORGAN BEATTY

Eight months ago headlines paid heed to the mouse that roared like a lion.

Enraptured, outsiders watched as Ronald Webster declared a constitution for his tiny island, and threatened to shoot anyone who denied him. Much of the world applauded. But that was last January.

Then the world forgot, or almost forgot, the tiny island, its 6,000 people and its 35 square miles of scrub brush and poverty.

This reporter has just revisited Anguilla and talked with the self-styled president, Ronald Webster, and the British officials who were sent to the island and took it over with paratroopers in March. They are the people who replaced the Webster vigilantes, the Anguillans who patrolled the beaches against invaders.

Anguilla revisited is a voyage of discovery, the discovery of a new Anguilla, whose leader has abandoned his cry of total independence and says he now would accept a "constitution under the British Commonwealth as good or better than my own."

WHY CHANGE?

What has happened to make the big change?

Much has happened.

The British government has persuaded the independent and associated states of the Caribbean to act in concert. They are the same governments whose leaders asked the British to take over.

They have all agreed that a Caribbean commission of wise men, independent of governments, would recommend a future course for the tiny island.

The British have guaranteed that Anguillans will never have to live again under constitutional supervision they do not approve. And Robert Bradshaw, the wilful premier of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, who tried to force Anguilla to bow to his rule, has accepted the compromise of a commission of wise men.

The British government has tried to repair 300 years of neglect of Anguilla, neglect by both Britain and the Bradshaw regime.

BUILD ROADS

A system of direct aid now bypasses the treasury of St. Kitts-Nevis. Bulldozers and tractors roar through the island, making a long airstrip to accommodate huge British Hercules transports and carving out long strips of road to connect the few village spots of black top. The opening of the first 10 miles of solid road was the occasion for an island-wide celebration recently. They are building a new school, too.

British land rovers buzz through the island, taking military doctors to their field hospital, taking crews to help dig water wells, and scoop out water storage areas. Villages now are twinkling with low-tension electric power, power that once served only a few buildings, here and there. In the last year and a half, Britain has allocated $240,000 in direct aid to Anguilla.

The departing British commissioner, John Cumber, has persuaded the Anguilla Council to help administer island services, such as the Anguillan police, the civil service, and a return to Commonwealth and West Indian law and justice. Deputy Commissioner Simon Heman, in charge of this, says the islanders are working like Trojans to learn the arts of self-government.

Webster describes the process of change from the day in 1367 when the islanders decided they had had enough of being the tattered tail of St. Kitts' constitutional kite. They drove away Kittian police.

They allowed Britain a year to hear their pleas. And then, in Webster's words, they gave Mother Britain an ultimatum. They would declare their total independence, and they did last January.

SHOTS FIRED

There followed the brief withdrawal of British administration; a visiting British foreign service officer, William Whitlock, heard shots fired over his head. He accepted an Anguillan escort off the island. The British said Mafia-like corruption would come, and so they sent paratroopers on March 19. They landed without a shot being fired.

Webster is still chairman of the Anguilla Council, as he was before the British landed, but he works under British administration. He accepted this temporary arrangement until the Caribbean wise men make recommendations.

He says the people of Anguilla never wanted independence from Britain, only independence from the arbitrary grouping of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla. He describes Britain as Anguilla's mother. He still insists that Anguilla was invaded by the paratroopers, an act that heaped coals of critical fire on the heads of the British government for "gunboat diplomacy."

Today, 100-odd paratroopers, and small squads of Scotland Yard police, are in charge of defence, and law and order. Nobody objects, neither Ronald Webster nor Robert Bradshaw.

The mystery that remains is the question: Who wrote the imitation American constitution promulgated by Webster last January? Island gossip says an American investor wrote it, a man named Jack Holcomb of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Neither Webster nor Holcomb is saying. But articles 11 and 12 would surrender the right of eminent domain to private investors, and restrict the Anguilla government to public utilities. And the chief justice under the Webster constitution would not have had to have a degree in law from any recognized university.

WARNED OF MAFIA

That led the British government to charge that Anguilla was in danger of being ruled by Mafia-type corruption. It led some West Indian lawyers to charge that the Webster constitution was a mockery.

Webster disagrees. He says his document is still alive, until the wise men speak.

His political opponents on the island answer that the Webster vigilantes ruled the beaches under the Webster constitution, that it could not be a system of American law, and it was far from British constitutional law.

Arch-critic Atlin Harrigan, editor of the Anguilla Beacon, says the Webster constitution is dead. And Webster himself talks as if he is using it merely as a bargaining point.

The British government now understands Anguilla's anguish. The only hope for the islanders in the past had been migration. Some 2,000 Anguillans are working in automobile factories near Wimbledon, England. Some 2,000 more are in New York and New Jersey with another 2,000 in the Virgin Islands and elsewhere in the Caribbean.

SENT MONEY

These 6,000, most of them breadwinners, send back money to relatives in Anguilla.

Anguilla still sells a half a million pounds of lobster to the outside world each year. It issues postage stamps that sell well among collectors. The new Anguilla has found another profitable sideline, selling the national flag created by Ronald Webster. The three blue dolphins, chasing each other head to tail, on a field of white, fetch $2 each among flag collectors. And the British help along by flying the blue dolphins on Government House.

But this is not enough to lift Anguilla out of poverty. This is not enough to meet the Caribbean-wide problem of defence and law enforcement, a problem created when Britain began to pull out. This is not enough to wipe out the cruelty of a life that must be lived with pockets often empty.

Russian Schools In North Tops

MONTREAL (CP) — The people who teach northern Canada's Indians and Eskimos might find some of the solutions to their problems across the Arctic in the Soviet Union.

In a paper presented Tuesday at the first international conference on cross-cultural education, Quebec economist Eric Gourdeau says the Soviet Union has apparently achieved more success than other countries in educating its northern minority groups.

Mr. Gourdeau attributes this to the approach to education adopted when the Soviet Union began education of these groups during the 1930s.

The role of the Soviet northern schools is to prepare students to play "a patriotic and efficient" part in the development of northern territories while preserving some traditional northern civilizations and integrating others, he says.

Teachers are trained in pedagogical colleges in the North which are open to members of the Soviet Union's northern minority groups.

In the schools themselves, the pupil's native tongue is used at the elementary level while Russian language instruction is progressively introduced and the pupil's learning is related to his culture and environment.

Mr. Gourdeau says that, while the complete results of the Soviet Union's program of education for its northern minority groups were not available to him, "it is in Russia that the results seem the most interesting."

Bennett Sounds 'Vietnam' Alarm

B.C. Next Domino In NDP Blueprint

By JOHN MIKA

MERRITT — Premier Bennett Tuesday night warned that British Columbia is the Vietnam of Canada.

Financed by United States unions, which want to see all provinces and even the federal government fall to the socialists like dominoes, an army of tough NDP organizers has quietly slipped through the Rocky Mountain passes to infiltrate British Columbia and try to overthrow Social Credit.

It's all part of a socialist master-plan to take over the country, which went into operation this summer when the NDP seized power in a sleeping Manitoba, he claims.

So the premier, travelling 25,000 miles he says, in a chauffeured government limousine, is sounding the alarm throughout B.C. to ensure Liberals realize they will be voting against free enterprise by supporting their party, instead of switching to Social Credit Aug. 27 to stop the socialist advance.

But the province is waking up and the premier is more confident that the government will be returned than he has been in all previous elections he has called.

That was Bennett's message to about 320 persons here who listened quietly for the most part, but murmured with laughter a couple of times.

Gently Heckled Through Speech

The premier was heckled gently through an hour's speech, the longest of his campaign so far, and accused about 10 persons who ostentatiously walked out on him at intervals of "being Liberals who can't take it."

He was speaking on behalf of Irvine Corbett, one-time Socred MLA making his third bid to beat William Hartley, who took the Yale-Lillooett seat from him for the NDP.

"No provincial election was so important ever as this one, and this is not time for splinter parties.

"The provincial Liberals are just a splinter, and a Liberal vote is just as bad as a vote against free enterprise.

"This is no time to stick with party and if ever there was a time to walk the floor and vote for our party that time is now."

Hundreds of 'Troops' Moved In

"They have moved hundreds and hundreds of their troops to B.C. from Saskatchewan — canvassing everywhere, throwing political dust everywhere.

"And the labor-boss money is coming in from New York and Washington, D.C.

(Attorney-General Leslie Peterson last session quoted U.S. Congressional records showing international unions with Canadian affiliates had made donations to help finance the founding convention of the NDP.)

"Make no mistake, the socialists won because Manitoba was asleep. If they win here it will not be because you were not told," he contiued.

"If they win in British Columbia they'll move their troops to Saskatchewan next, that Liberal province of Saskatchewan, and I ask you Liberals to think about that.

"And then if they win there, they'll go on to Ontario.

"And then they will go on to the federal government.

"The socialists have this plan and I know it.

"I'm here as premier to tell you that there is this situation here, and I am speaking to you here in Merritt and to all the people in this province, so you will know what the issue is in this election.

Somebody on Construction Crew

"But I have confidence in the people of British Columbia.

"I am confident more tonight than ever before that Liberals and Conservatives here and elsewhere in this province will support the government candidates because they don't want state socialism.

"And that's the reason why I'm here, because as your premier I want your help.

"Because if the socialists are elected in B.C., capital will not come into our province. It will go out and we need capital to make jobs.

"Socialists won't have to do a single thing in the legislature to hurt the economy of this province.

"The very day they're elected, which God forbid, they'll hurt this country."

$1 MILLION BIBLE ROBBERY THWARTED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—A 20-year-old rope-climbing burglar apparently fell early today from the Widener Library of Havard University while attempting to carry away the $1 million Guttenberg Bible.

Police said they found Vido K. Aras of the Dorchester section of Boston lying on the ground nearly unconscious in the library's interior courtyard. Above the young man was hanging a 40-foot rope attached to a mezzanine window.

Authorities said the famed bible was in a knapsack beside Aras. He was taken to Cambridge hospital with lacerations and a possible skull fracture, apparently sustained in a fall from the rope.

Keeping Informed Costly for Public

The official in the department of health was asked this morning what funds had been appropriated for the information advertising campaign placed in every daily newspaper in the province and most of the 104 weeklies serving rural areas.

He said he had no idea what the advertising budget was or who was responsible for placing the advertisements.

"I don't know what the budget is," he said. "I didn't have anything to do with it, and, to the best of my knowledge, this department isn't being charged."

DOES NOT KNOW

When asked if he could provide the name of the individual in charge of the information campaign, which government members claim is not part of the election campaign but coincidental to it, he said he didn't know "which department was responsible."

When it was pointed out that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Dr. J. A. Taylor were listed as the official signers of a series of pollution informations the official said: "Yes, I know . . . I still don't know who placed the advertisements. To the best of my knowledge they are not being charged to this department."

It was learned, however, that at least one of the advertisements—a five column by 15-inch "health branch policy concerning sewage treatment" display published throughout the province Aug. 13—is being billed to the B.C. Government, Department of Health.

Estimated cost of this advertisement alone if placed in all dailies and weeklies in the province, would be $13,000.

But that is only one of a series of advertisements slammed throughout the province since the first week in August.

McGEER CONFIDENT AREA WILL SWING

People 'Reject Extremism'

By JOHN DRISCOLL

When he talks about the resurrection of the Liberal party, Pat McGeer's speeches crackle with energetic words.

Words like vim, zip, fire, guts, dynamic and climax.

Liberal leader McGeer used them all Tuesday as he stumped through what he called the "swing ridings" of Victoria, Esquimalt, and Saanich and the Islands.

He told about 300 supporters at an Elk Lake corn roast that the Liberals can form a majority government with these ridings.

"Our campaign has not yet reached its peak in some ridings," he said.

SEE CHANGE COMING

McGeer who has predicted Liberal wins in 15 ridings made no predictions about local ridings held by Socreds in the last legislature.

The Social Credit ship is sinking, said McGeer, because they have failed to come up with new and exciting candidates.

"Surely there must be questions about this woefully weak representation."

"The problems around the province, Victoria's got in spades," he said.

McGeer said the priorities in Victoria are cleaning up polluted beaches, cracking down on air pollution, eliminating hospital crowding, nourishing the University of Victoria and ending the neglect of highways.

He said Premier Bennett has waged a campaign of fear, beginning with "the unbelievable appeal to vote for him in order to avoid the Marxist Socialist NDP conspiracy."

"You've heard the charges he's made. I ask you—are these the rational statements of a leader who has a vision of the future for British Columbia?"

The Liberals as the commonsense, middle-of-the-road, party are attracting thousands of supporters who are rejecting extremism of the left and of the right, he said.

"Take courage and join us. Elect the dynamic young Liberal candidates who will form the next government."

Continuing the positive approach he has taken from the outset of his campaign July 25, McGeer announced:

LONE HECKLER

McGeer answered that while he was in favor of medicare the most pressing problem was the lack of hospital beds.

A few moments later the heckler and a youth made menacing gestures toward each other and McGeer snapped: "Let's settle our political arguments with rational discussions and not by violence."

The pair did not come to blows.

"What are you going to do

Economic Council Pledged by Berger

By BRUCE YEMEN

VANCOUVER — New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger said Tuesday an NDP government would try to end an "every man for himself" attitude on the part of management and labor by putting representatives of each on a British Columbia Economic Council with major responsibilities.

Berger made the policy statement shortly after arriving here Tuesday from an extended interior swing which has improved his hopes for an NDP government after Aug. 27.

He was to campaign in Vancouver Centre today before heading out Thursday on the final leg of his campaign.

Berger said the NDP would set up a broadly representative economic council and give it the job of charting a course for the development of secondary industry in the pursuit of full employment in the province.

Besides giving advice on what incentives the government might provide for secondary industry, the council would make public forecasts of economic activity for the year and years ahead.

It would be the hope of the government that management and labor could accept the responsibility for keeping wage and price patterns within the forecast limits.

This was not intended as a "magic solution" for economic problems, said Berger.

But it would be a serious attempt to encourage a sense of responsibility in labor and management.

RESPONSIBILITIES

Berger said the council would be equipped with a permanent chairman and skilled staff, it would have larger responsibilities in B.C. than the national Economic Council has in Canada, but the two bodies should work closely together.

Decisions on economic policy would still rest with the cabinet and the legislature, Berger said, but the assistance offered by the council would end the province's current "seat of the pants" style of economic policy-making based on insufficient knowledge.

Political Battle Developing As U.K. Army Guards Ulster

BELFAST (CP) — A running political battle appeared developing today as the British government, backed by 6,000 troops, took a firm grip on Northern Ireland's security forces and prepared to make its voice heard in the way Ulster is governed.

The agreement reached at 10 Downing Street in London Tuesday night between British Prime Minister Wilson and Ulster Premier James Chichester-Clark already has come under attack from leading figures in Northern Ireland's governing Unionist party.

One former minister said there will be a powerful demand for Chichester-Clark's Protestant government to resign.

The two leaders wrangled for six hours late Tuesday night before agreeing on a communique which placed all of Northern Ireland's public security forces —including the B-Specials, hated by the minority Roman Catholics—under the control of the British Army.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations today the security council listened to the Irish Republic's complaint about British actions in Northern Ireland but agreed with Britain that any action would be unwarranted interference in Britain's internal affais.

FULL RIGHTS

Ireland asked for a UN peacekeeping force to be sent to Northern Ireland to keep the peace between Protestants and Catholics, insisted that Northern Ireland was an integral part of Ireland and said British troops in the north would cause trouble.

But the council voted 15-0 not to take action.

The communique from London also pledged full civil rights for all Ulster citizens, regardless of religion, and provided for two senior British civil servants to be attached to the Northern Ireland government in an advisory capacity.

Well-informed sources in London expected a high-ranking British cabinet minister to be appointed full-time to the Ulster government in the near future.

Britain has residual authority to take complete control from the hands of the Northern Ireland government and run the country as it pleases. The moves announced by Wilson came nowhere near such action but they represented the most drastic act of intervention in Irish affairs since the nation was partitioned and Southern Ireland became an independent state.

Wilson said in his broadcast that the assumption of responsibility for law and order did not mean any alteration to the 1920 Act of Partition which split Northern and Southern Ireland. He emphasized there was no question of any boundary changes.

Moon Motion: Free and Easy

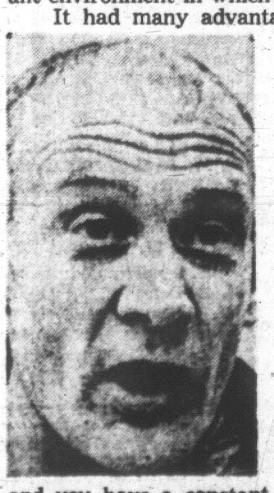

This is the second in a series of first-person accounts by the men who walked on the moon. Today Edwin Aldrin gives his impression of the incredible feat in which he shared, as pilot of the lunar module and the second man on a celestial body.

By EDWIN E. ALDRIN, JR.
(Special to the Times)

I am curious to find out just how long those footprints will linger on the surface of the moon. It was a very good surface for footprints; that light, rather powdery material turned out to have considerable cohesion and it compacted easily.

The moon was a very natural and very pleasant environment in which to work.

It had many advantages of zero gravity in that all movements required a very low application of force, but it was in a sense less lonesome than zero-G, in which you always have to pay attention to securing attachment points to give you some means of leverage. You have no sense of up or down and there's no such thing as having any balance because there is no force or resistance to a pushing action.

In one-sixth gravity, on the moon, you have a distinct feeling of being somewhere and you have a constant, though at many times ill-defined, sense of direction and force.

One of my tasks was to try to determine just which is the best means of locomotion on the surface of the moon. Not surprisingly, it turned out to be the same one we use here: one foot in front of the other. The kangaroo hop, jumping with both feet, can be used but I felt it gave me less control of my motions.

Long, almost loping steps seemed to work best. It's quite natural in that environment to take longer steps than on Earth, because everything seems to move in slow motion and you get an almost floating feeling. You can't get your feet moving quite so fast to begin with, but it is also more difficult to stop your motion.

'Beautiful People' Hassle McGeer

McGeer was there to eat a box lunch and speak to supporters.

The young people were there because they almost always are there.

One young man who identified himself as Jim Batt told McGeer he was like all politicians.

"We shouldn't let the beautiful people disturb us," shouted McGeer.

Then one of the young people asked McGeer what he would do about keeping the province's resources in B.C.

McGeer said advanced secondary industry was the answer, and suggested industries making computers, chemicals, optic products and drugs for the Victoria area.

★

"What about the barrier between youth and the older people?" Batt asked. "What about the generation gap?"

"There is no generation gap," replied McGeer and one young girl agreed with him.

The discussion became an exercise in semantics. Batt declared that words were useless as a form of communication.

"What is society?" asked one young lady.

Batt spoke up again, insisting there is a generation gap.

"I think it's a problem in your mind," McGeer countered.

Saanich and the Island's Liberal candidate, Louis Lindholm was asked by a youth if he would be ashamed to have the square's hippies come to the riding to work for him.

Lindholm invited them to come and canvass any time.

McGeer and his party began to make their way from the square, shaking hands with some, nodding at others. The Liberal supporters applauded politely.

Curtis Scores Liaison Lack On Pat Bay Road

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis today accused the provincial government of a complete lack of co-operation regarding plans for the Patricia Bay Highway.

"We have been shown old plans for the eventual route, but each year brings new developments along with it to make us wonder."

Curtis said the municipality must get its information from provincial reaction to rezoning requests by developers within a half mile of the highway.

'NON-PARTISAN'

"We are learning more about the route through approvals by the province of new developments than by any liaison."

Curtis emphasized he was meeting McGeer as a non-partisan mayor and had met earlier NDP leader Tom Berger and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

He refused to say which meeting impressed him most and said he was encouraged by all of them.

'OOZING BACKYARDS'

He was critical of the surplus accumulated by the government in the light of pressing municipal needs.

McGeer said a Liberal government would rewrite the Municipal Act.

"Both power and financial means must be placed in the hands of municipal governments," he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you please tell me whether there is a French language newspaper published in Vancouver. If there is, please let me know who the editor is and the address.

A. Vancouver has a weekly French newspaper called "le Soleil". The editor is Andre Piolap, 661, 15th Ave. E., Vancouver 10.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Pensioner Protests Book Fines

Five cents a day is too much to ask old-age pensioners to pay for books overdue from the Victoria Public Library, the library board was told in a letter Tuesday.

Old people, who because of "circumstances beyond their control" can't get to the library in time with their returned books shouldn't be fined the "inflationary cost" of five cents, wrote Jennie Waugh, 71, of 2633 Shelbourne.

Miss Waugh, a pensioner, said she hoped fines would be reduced to one cent a day for old people on low fixed incomes.

The fine is not a problem for young people who earn high wages, Miss Waugh said.

At one time the fine for each overdue book from the library was two cents a day.

But the reduction wasn't really necessary, said librarian John Lort, because the rule isn't absolutely inflexible. Fines can be deferred if a book borrower contacts the library to say he is ill or otherwise quite unable to bring the books back.

Boys Admit Playing With Matches Near Mill

Three boys, aged 10, 11 and 12, have told Saanich police they were playing with matches near sawdust bins at the Van Isle Moulding & Millwork, Ltd., mill which burned down Saturday night.

Damages to the Del Monte Avenue mill, which employed 40 men, were estimated at $506,300.

The boys were brought to police by their parents after the father of one recognized a newspaper description of his son's bicycle. He alerted the other boys' parents.

"The parents were most co-operative, though naturally upset," said Insp. Harry Adams.

The Election . . . Oak Bay

Cat-and-Mouse Time Again Behind the Tweed Curtain

By JOHN MIKA

The rest of British Columbia may be in the throes of a provincial election struggle but in Oak Bay it's just time to play that old cat-and-mouse game again.

The cat — a purring, powerful specimen — is none other than Premier Bennett, the riding's own most famous resident.

The election may send other ridings into an orgy of ideology, issues and debates but Oak Bay has always stood four-square for free enterprise and tradition. The "socialism or Social Credit" gambit has been irrelevant — as the abysmal returns for each succeeding left-wing candidate have shown.

●

Instead, the election writ only raises anew the excitement-tingling question: from which direction will the pussycat pounce this time?

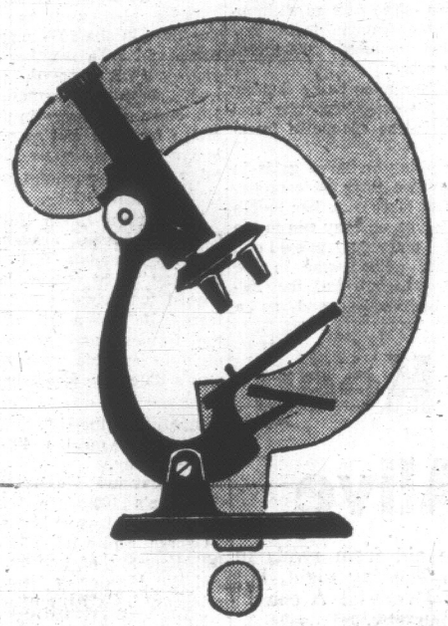

And the campaign will only decide whether the mouse will be caught at last.

Whatever the outcome on Aug. 27 Premier Bennett will be able to say truthfully that he has tried everything.

Because in the 1969 campaign he has entered a Social Creidt candidate dressed in enemy colors — another mouse, that roars, so to speak.

Will it work? Oak Bay voters will decide.

The Oak Bay that conjures the "Tweed Curtain" image and the Oak Bay that sends a member to the B.C. legislature are two different things.

For example: the municipality,, with a population of roughly 19,000, had, by 1967 figures, 21 per cent — three times the national average — of its residents over the age of 65.

A capital region planning board report says fewer than 6,000 of these residents work. Of these, 40 per cent hold professional or managerial positions (Oak Bay has the highest median wage in Greater Victoria) but only 800 of the total work in Oak Bay. The rest head downtown.

But while the municipality itself has only 19,000 souls, the population of the political constituency is much greater, and has 23,992 voters this year.

This is because Oak Bay riding has a big chunk of Saanich municipality to contend with. Most of it was tacked on in the 1966 redistribution which added the Gordon Head area and brought the riding to 10 square miles.

It's hard to label because it is one of the Island's — and the province's — fast-growth areas. In what seems only a decade it has changed from a rural outskirt to a suburban bedroom.

And in that bedroom (it's occupants are not precisely counted) sleep a lot of young families in new houses; expensive houses with two-car garages and newly-seeded lawns and little children on their way to jamming schools.

Oak Bay's first member, elected in 1941, was widely-known Conservative Herbert Anscomb who served until 1952.

HOW THEY VOTED IN 1966

Macfarlane, Alan (L)	8,118
Ennals, Charles (SC)	5,808
Yarwood, Myra (NDP)	976
And the byelection, 1968
Cox, Allan (L)	7,892
Pollen, Peter (SC)	4,678
Yardwood, Myra (NDP)	654

In 1952, Social Credit and the CCF combined to demolish the old-line parties in the province's most dramatic political upheaval.

Tory Oak Bay, however, utterly ignored the radicals and decided that fair play demanded giving the Liberals a turn at bat. In the subsequent three elections it returned Liberal Archie Gibbs as its MLA.

●

The cat-and-mouse game started in the 1953 election. Flushed with his Cinderella-style success, Premier Bennett was so sure Oak Bay would conform with all the other ridings that joined his bandwagon in the run-off election that he assigned his personal friend and formally-appointed finance minister, Einar Gunderson, to unseating ex-reeve Gibbs.

Oak Bay threw Gunderson right back at Bennett and the premier was forced to open a "safe" Socred seat in a Victoria byelection later the same year in an effort to get his most important minister into the legislature.

However, even Socred Victoria hufflily refused to accept a man that had been given a bum's rush by its little neighbor and it slammed the door on Gunderson by electing a Liberal too.

●

The premier had to swallow a double humiliation and take over the finance portfolio himself while Gunderson departed centre stage for the shadows of the back room. Bennett determined to teach Oak Bay a lesson.

Evidence that the premier has always taken the affront personally can be seen to this day in the incredible ease with which Oak Bay's successive Liberal MLAs have been able to arouse tantrums just by smiling indulgently at their "constituent" across the floor.

Gibbs, the giant-killer, died just before the 1960 election. The Socreds craftily persuaded his successor as Oak Bay reeve, George Murdoch, to run for them. But a young lawyer, Alan Macfarlane, held on for the Liberals.

In 1963, the Socreds tried to beat Macfarlane with another bright young professional, Dr. Charles Ennals, but failed — and failed again in 1966. (Ennals this year is Socred candidate in Cowichan-Malahat.)

Last year, after Macfarlane resigned and was elevated to the bench, the Socreds tried to cover all bases by running Peter Pollen, a man with youth, tremendous business success, obvious sincerity, dedication and concern about social justice — and previous connections with both the riding's Conservative and Liberal parties.

Now Bennett's condidate is an avowed and vocal critic of several policies central to Bennett's government. Dr. G. Scott Wallace, by running against Bennett, hopes (and Bennett hopes) to beat Cox.

Riding Covers More Than Oak Bay

Advance Polls Open Thursday

Advance polls for the Aug. 27 election will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 1 to 9 p.m.

Other locations are: Anglican Church Hall, 4th Street, Sidney, and Port Renfrew Community Hall.

Voters unable to attend an advance poll in their own constituency may use any other advance poll in British Columbia.

TOURIST CRUSH AT PEAK

Victoria's downtown hotels and motels were full this morning but motels outside the city had some vacancies.

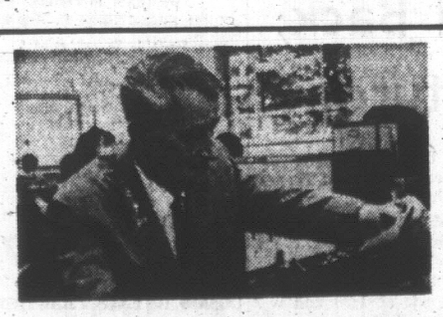

"Tourist trade has reached its peak during the past seven days," said Kenneth King, a director of Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau. "But so far no tourist has been unable to get accommodation in a hotel or motel.

"That is, the bureau had not had to use the list of private homes it keeps for emergencies."

Mike Heppell, manager of the bureau, said many visitors call to say there is no accommodation downtown.

"But there are a fair number of vacancies outside the city limits," he said.

Some hoteliers say Victoria's tourist trade this month is up on August last year. Others consider it is about the same.

Arthur Mayse . . .

TODAY I'D LIKE TO PASS on a much too familiar tale of woe precisely as it was poured into my ear. It concerns a mother who has come up against the housing crisis as it affects those least able to cope with it.

But let her tell it:

"The house I've been renting for my three children and myself has been sold. I have to find a place for us before the end of the month, and I'm not getting anywhere.

"I've contacted all the real estate companies, watched the ads, and been in touch with the Low Income Rental office. But no luck.

"The places that are reasonable won't accept children.

"If you're separated or divorced, they don't like to accept you on those grounds.

"I've gone to the social worker who had my case when we were on welfare, but all she could do was send me back to Low Rental. They're sympathetic, but they don't get places for a person in my circumstances."

★

As I said, this is by no means a unique account. But to hear it told so, in a strained and anxious voice, is to realize yet again that we harbor an over-supply of citizens who don't know where their next roof is coming from.

To round out this account, the mother in question is going up for Canadian Manpower job training in September. She will receive $80 a week with which to keep herself and her family.

I'm not running a rental agency here merely citing this one case in hopes that some reader can supply shingles. I have this mother's phone number, and will be glad to pass it on.

OAK BAY MARINA operator Bob Wright has made it plain that he will continue to rescue boatmen in trouble, but he harbors an understandable resentment against the agencies that apparently expect him to absorb the entire cost of such help in need.

Even if Wright succeeds in making his point with the federal transport department and the Air-Sea Rescue people, I hope the matter won't end there.

★

I have every respect for Air-Sea Rescue, and our Canadian Coast Guard as well. But in areas where pleasure and work craft swarm as thickly as they now do in our home waters, rescue facilities should be expanded.

I think the life-saving network should be beefed up with a Coast Guard longshore station, at least one powerful all-weather lifeboat, and a crew trained to work it in any weather.

Such a station should also have a helicopter on standby.

★

By all means, count on the civilian boatman for help in emergencies. He was responding gallantly and effectively to such calls long before either Coast Guard or Air-Sea Rescue were formed.

But it's high time he received professional year-round backing from a base closer to home than Vancouver. I think such a service here would much more than justify its cost.

IN OUR TOWN THERE IS a taxpayer who feels that Ottawa has done him wrong, and in consequence he is more than a little burned.

He is self-employed, which means that he's required to estimate his yearly income as best he can, and pay taxes on it by the quarter.

Last tax year, he found that he had not only under-guessed his income, but come to the April 30 tidying up with a tax debt to pay, plus interest on his owings.

This he was permitted to do on a month-by-month basis. Finally, to his pleasure, which he trusted the department of revenue would share, he turned in the last payment.

"The boys in the Victoria taxation office were nice about it," he reports. "In fact, it's a pleasure to do business with that staff, even when it costs you money. Then I got this letter from Ottawa."

★

The letter contained a bill for $200-plus. Across the bottom was typed the message that set him burning.

'You have failed to comply with your promise to pay your account promptly," it ran. "However, if you have already paid, return this account with details.'

This he did. And such details!

Bennett Sounds 'Vietnam' Alarm

B.C. Next Domino In NDP Blueprint

By JOHN MIKA

MERRITT — Premier Bennett Tuesday night warned that British Columbia is the Vietnam of Canada.

Financed by United States unions, which want to see all provinces and even the federal government fall to the socialists like dominoes, an army of tough NDP organizers has quietly slipped through the Rocky Mountain passes to infiltrate British Columbia and try to overthrow Social Credit.

It's all part of a socialist master-plan to take over the country, which went into operation this summer when the NDP seized power in a sleeping Manitoba, he claims.

So the premier, travelling 25,000 miles he says, in a chauffeured government limousine, is sounding the alarm throughout B.C. to ensure Liberals realize they will be voting against free enterprise by supporting their party, instead of switching to Social Credit Aug. 27 to stop the socialist advance.

But the province is waking up and the premier is more confident that the government will be returned than he has been in all previous elections he has called.

That was Bennett's message to about 320 persons here who listened quietly for the most part, but murmured with laughter a couple of times.

Gently Heckled Through Speech

The premier was heckled gently through an hour's speech, the longest of his campaign so far, and accused about 10 persons who ostentatiously walked out on him at intervals of "being Liberals who can't take it."

He was speaking on behalf of Irvine Corbett, one-time Socred MLA making his third bid to beat William Hartley, who took the Yale-Lillooett seat from him for the NDP.

"No provincial election was so important ever as this one, and this is not time for splinter parties.

"The provincial Liberals are just a splinter, and a Liberal vote is just as bad as a vote against free enterprise.

"This is no time to stick with party and if ever there was a time to walk the floor and vote for our party that time is now."

Hundreds of 'Troops' Moved In

"They have moved hundreds and hundreds of their troops to B.C. from Saskatchewan — canvassing everywhere, throwing political dust everywhere.

"And the labor-boss money is coming in from New York and Washington, D.C.

"Who put up the founding money to get the CCF name changed to the NDP? Our attorney-general gave the facts and figures.

(Attorney-General Leslie Peterson last session quoted U.S. Congressional records showing international unions with Canadian affiliates had made donations to help finance the founding convention of the NDP.)

"Make no mistake, the socialists won because Manitoba was asleep. If they win here it will not be because you were not told," he contiued.

"If they win in British Columbia they'll move their troops to Saskatchewan next, that Liberal province of Saskatchewan, and I ask you Liberals to think about that.

"And then if they win there, they'll go on to Ontario.

"And then they will go on to the federal government.

"The socialists have this plan and I know it.

"I'm here as premier to tell you that there is this situation here, and I am speaking to you here in Merritt and to all the people in this province, so you will know what the issue is in this election.

Somebody on Construction Crew

"But I have confidence in the people of British Columbia.

"I am confident more tonight than ever before that Liberals and Conservatives here and elsewhere in this province will support the government candidates because they don't want state socialism.

"And that's the reason why I'm here, because as your premier I want your help.

"Because if the socialists are elected in B.C., capital will not come into our province. It will go out and we need capital to make jobs.

"Socialists won't have to do a single thing in the legislature to hurt the economy of this province.

"The very day they're elected, which God forbid, they'll hurt this country."

There was a ripple of laughter and Bennett angrily responded: "My friends, this is no laughing matter. This is very serious business."

$1 MILLION BIBLE ROBBERY THWARTED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—A 20-year-old rope-climbing burglar apparently fell early today from the Widener Library of Havard University while attempting to carry away the $1 million Guttenberg Bible.

Police said they found Vido K. Aras of the Dorchester section of Boston lying on the ground nearly unconscious in the library's interior courtyard. Above the young man was hanging a 40-foot rope attached to a mezzanine window.

Authorities said the famed bible was in a knapsack beside Aras. He was taken to Cambridge hospital with lacerations and a possible skull fracture, apparently sustained in a fall from the rope.

Keeping Informed Costly for Public

The provincial government's massive "information" campaign, mounted earlier this month, has left at least one senior government official uninformed.

The official in the department of health was asked this morning what funds had been appropriated for the information advertising campaign placed in every daily newspaper in the province and most of the 104 weeklies serving rural areas.

He said he had no idea what the advertising budget was or who was responsible for placing the advertisements.

"I don't know what the budget is," he said. "I didn't have anything to do with it, and, to the best of my knowledge, this department isn't being charged."

DOES NOT KNOW

When asked if he could provide the name of the individual in charge of the information campaign, which government members claim is not part of the election campaign but coincidental to it, he said he didn't know "which department was responsible."

When it was pointed out that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Dr. J. A. Taylor were listed as the official signers of a series of pollution informations the official said: "Yes, I know . . . I still don't know who placed the advertisements. To the best of my knowledge they are not being charged to this department."

It was learned, however, that at least one of the advertisements—a five column by 15-inch "health branch policy concerning sewage treatment" display published throughout the province Aug. 13—is being billed to the B.C. Government, Department of Health.

Estimated cost of this advertisement alone if placed in all dailies and weeklies in the province, would be $13,000.

But that is only one of a series of advertisements slammed throughout the province since the first week in August.

McGEER CONFIDENT AREA WILL SWING

People 'Reject Extremism'

By JOHN DRISCOLL

When he talks about the resurrection of the Liberal party, Pat McGeer's speeches crackle with energetic words.

Words like vim, zip, fire, guts, dynamic and climax.

Liberal leader McGeer used them all Tuesday as he stumped through what he called the "swing ridings" of Victoria, Esquimalt, and Saanich and the Islands.

He told about 300 supporters at an Elk Lake corn roast that the Liberals can form a majority government with these ridings.

"Our campaign has not yet reached its peak in some ridings," he said.

SEE CHANGE COMING

"But you can see the change coming here, the same change we've seen in the interior and in the north."

McGeer who has predicted Liberal wins in 15 ridings made no predictions about local ridings held by Socreds in the last legislature.

The Social Credit ship is sinking, said McGeer, because they have failed to come up with new and exciting candidates.

"Surely there must be questions about this woefully weak representation."

"The problems around the province, Victoria's got in spades," he said.

McGeer said the priorities in Victoria are cleaning up polluted beaches, cracking down on air pollution, eliminating hospital crowding, nourishing the University of Victoria and ending the neglect of highways.

He said Premier Bennett has waged a campaign of fear, beginning with "the unbelievable appeal to vote for him in order to avoid the Marxist Socialist NDP conspiracy."

"You've heard the charges he's made. I ask you—are these the rational statements of a leader who has a vision of the future for British Columbia?"

The Liberals as the commonsense, middle-of-the-road, party are attracting thousands of supporters who are rejecting extremism of the left and of the right, he said.

"Take courage and join us. Elect the dynamic young Liberal candidates who will form the next government."

Continuing the positive approach he has taken from the outset of his campaign July 25, McGeer announced:

"I'm now arranging to move to Victoria to live here year-round."

LONE HECKLER

A lone heckler pumped McGeer about his stand on medicare.

McGeer answered that while he was in favor of medicare the most pressing problem was the lack of hospital beds.

A few moments later the heckler and a youth made menacing gestures toward each other and McGeer snapped: "Let's settle our political arguments with rational discussions and not by violence."

The pair did not come to blows.

"What are you going to do

Economic Council Pledged by Berger

By BRUCE YEMEN

VANCOUVER — New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger said Tuesday an NDP government would try to end an "every man for himself" attitude on the part of management and labor by putting representatives of each on a British Columbia Economic Council with major responsibilities.

Berger made the policy statement shortly after arriving here Tuesday from an extended interior swing which has improved his hopes for an NDP government after Aug. 27.

He was to campaign in Vancouver Centre today before heading out Thursday on the final leg of his campaign.

Berger said the NDP would set up a broadly representative economic council and give it the job of charting a course for the development of secondary industry in the pursuit of full employment in the province.

Besides giving advice on what incentives the government might provide for secondary industry, the council would make public forecasts of economic activity for the year and years ahead.

It would be the hope of the government that management and labor could accept the responsibility for keeping wage and price patterns within the forecast limits.

This was not intended as a "magic solution" for economic problems, said Berger.

But it would be a serious attempt to encourage a sense of responsibility in labor and management.

RESPONSIBILITIES

Berger said the council would be equipped with a permanent chairman and skilled staff, it would have larger responsibilities in B.C. than the national Economic Council has in Canada, but the two bodies should work closely together.

Decisions on economic policy would still rest with the cabinet and the legislature; Berger said, but the assistance offered by the council would end the province's current "seat of the pants" style of economic policy-making based on insufficient knowledge.

Political Battle Developing As U.K. Army Guards Ulster

BELFAST (CP) — A running political battle appeared developing today as the British government, backed by 6,000 troops, took a firm grip on Northern Ireland's security forces and prepared to make its voice heard in the way Ulster is governed.

The agreement reached at 10 Downing Street in London Tuesday night between British Prime Minister Wilson and Ulster Premier James Chichester-Clark already has come under attack from leading figures in Northern Ireland's governing Unionist party.

One former minister said there will be a powerful demand for Chichester-Clark's Protestant government to resign.

The two leaders wrangled for six hours late Tuesday night before agreeing on a communique which placed all of Northern Ireland's public security forces —including the B-Specials, hated by the minority Roman Catholics—under the control of the British Army.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations today the security council listened to the Irish Republic's complaint about British actions in Northern Ireland but agreed with Britain that any action would be unwarranted interference in Britain's internal affais.

FULL RIGHTS

Ireland asked for a UN peacekeeping force to be sent to Northern Ireland to keep the peace between Protestants and Catholics, insisted that Northern Ireland was an integral part of Ireland and said British troops in the north would cause trouble.

But the council voted 15-0 not to take action.

The communique from London also pledged full civil rights for all Ulster citizens, regardless of religion, and provided for two senior British civil servants to be attached to the Northern Ireland government in an advisory capacity.

Well-informed sources in London expected a high-ranking British cabinet minister to be appointed full-time to the Ulster government in the near future.

Britain has residual authority to take complete control from the hands of the Northern Ireland government and run the country as it pleases. The moves announced by Wilson came nowhere near such action but they represented the most drastic act of intervention in Irish affairs since the nation was partitioned and Southern Ireland became an independent state.

Wilson said in his broadcast that the assumption of responsibility for law and order did not mean any alteration to the 1920 Act of Partition which split Northern and Southern Ireland. He emphasized there was no question of any boundary changes.

Moon Motion: Free and Easy

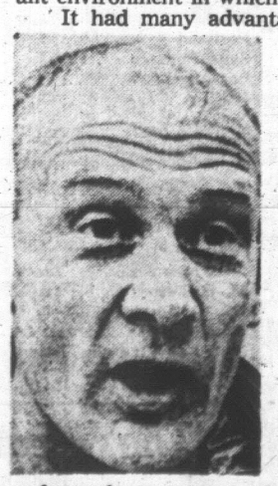

This is the second in a series of first-person accounts by the men who walked on the moon. Today Edwin Aldrin gives his impression of the incredible feat in which he shared, as pilot of the lunar module and the second man on a celestial body.

By EDWIN E. ALDRIN, JR.
(Special to the Times)

I am curious to find out just how long those footprints will linger on the surface of the moon. It was a very good surface for footprints; that light, rather powdery material turned out to have considerable cohesion and it compacted easily.

The moon was a very natural and very pleasant environment in which to work.

It had many advantages of zero gravity in that all movements required a very low application of force, but it was in a sense less lonesome than zero-G, in which you always have to pay attention to securing attachment points to give you some means of leverage. You have no sense of up or down and there's no such thing as having any balance because there is no force or resistance to a pushing action.

In one-sixth gravity, on the moon, you have a distinct feeling of being somewhere and you have a constant, though at many times ill-defined, sense of direction and force.

One of my tasks was to try to determine just which is the best means of locomotion on the surface of the moon. Not surprisingly, it turned out to be the same one we use here: one foot in front of the other. The kangaroo hop, jumping with both feet, can be used but I felt it gave me less control of my motions.

Long, almost loping steps seemed to work best. It's quite natural in that environment to take longer steps than on Earth, because everything seems to move in slow motion and you get an almost floating feeling. You can't get your feet moving quite so fast to begin with, but it is also more difficult to stop your motion.

Karate Students Idled As Billing Miffs Tutor

Tournament director Emil Repack of Penticton, billed as head referee, said Dr. Olaf E. Simon, a 10th degree black belt karate master from Calgary, left when he learned he was to be chief judge, considered a lower position.

Simon, considered among the top 20 karate experts in the world, then pulled out 40 participants and their instructors, who are under contract to him, using his methods and name in karate schools, and prevented them from competing.

Most of the 40 were from Regina. Repack said some of the instructors involved told him they will seek legal advice, possibly in view of challenging Simon's action. Nature of the contracts between Simon and his instructors is not known.

Repack emerged as tournament champion from the 65 British Columbia, Montana and Prairie participants remaining. He was declared winner when Dwight Scheer of Saskatoon accidentally hit him in the mouth, breaking Repack's dentures in four places.

JOCKETTE WINS THREE

MONTREAL (CP) — Mary Bacon, 19, of Oklahoma stunned fans at Blue Bonnets Raceway for the second time in less than a week Tuesday when she won three races on the same card and finished in the money in all five races she entered.

It was the first time a woman jockey in North America won that many races on the same card. Last Saturday, she became the first woman jockey ever to win a thoroughbred race in Eastern Canada, also at Blue Bonnets.

The pretty, Chicago-born jockey rode Royal Sucree to a win in the third race, Banquet Hall in the sixth and Fleet Arab in the eighth.

Boxla Clubs Seek Titles

Four minor lacrosse squads from the Greater Victoria area are heading into playoffs for the B.C. title, two playing at home and two on the mainland.

Two Victoria tyke teams will tackle mainland champions in provincial playdowns at G. R. Pearkes Arena Saturday and Sunday.

Victoria's Colwood Shell captured the Tyke "A" Island title with a 21-7, two-game, total-goal victory over Nanaimo Local "8" and Victoria Mowhawks downed Nananaimo Cablevision 31-5 under the same system for the Tyke "B" championship.

Esquimalt's Owl Drugs downed Bayliss Neon of Victoria 31-16 for the right to advance to the provincial Peewee "A" playoffs at Killarney, Aug. 30-31.

Capital Handymen of Hampton will seek the B.C Novice "B" crown in Coquitlam this weekend after beating Nanaimo 12-8 in the two-game Island final.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

That local beaches should be polluted with human faeces in an era when technology can place men on the moon is hard to believe. This pollution results from sewage being discharged through outfalls so short, that at low tide, the sewage is discharged on to the beach. Action to clean up this health hazard must be given top priority. The Greater Victoria Sewerage Study carried out by engineers in 1966 recommended that construction of extended outfalls to stated distances and at stated depths, without primary treatment, would correct the situation. Confusion exists in the minds of the public since the validity of the study has been questioned by various professionals, such as biologists, oceanographers and doctors on the basis that insufficient study has been done on the nature of the currents, tides, etc., in the receiving waters. The Pollution Committee of the Victoria Medical Society and the Environmental Health Committee of th B.C. Medical Association have expressed concern over the proposed sewage disposal into our coastal waters until the necessary detailed ocean studies have been performed and evaluated. It would indeed be folly to proceed with the proposed installation of outfalls and possibly also primary treatment plants, at very considerable expense, only to find that we had created one large cesspool off shore, due to lack of adequate ocean current. If elected, I would strongly advocate the immediate creation of a study group, composed of hydrographic and oceanographic experts, biologists and engineers, to begin the immediate search for the ocean data now unknown. As the situation stands today, this is the only sensible step to take, for the Sewage Report itself includes the statement, "much more extensive oceanographic data must be obtained."
